FINAL EDITION

VOL. 53, NO. 276 (News Established 1885) Combined (Journal Established 1930) 1932 MANSFIELD, OHIO, SATURDAY, JANUARY 29, 1938 15 CTS. PER WEEK BY CARRIER PRICE THREE CENTS

News-Journal Adds INS Leased Wire Tuesday--Meet Some of Our New Star Reporters

STARTING Tuesday, Feb. 1, The News-Journal will provide for its readers the most intensive and elaborate coverage of state, national and world news offered by any paper its size anywhere.

Knickerbocker

Durno

On that date, leased wire service of the International News Service will begin, and thenceforth The News-Journal will offer its readers news gathered by the greatest combination of news-gathering agencies it is possible to provide.

Already, The News-Journal is served by the Associated Press and United Press. The addition of International News Service to these two, which will be continued, gives The News-Journal the service of the third of the three greatest news-gathering associations in the nation.

Only a few other papers in Ohio—and all of them in cities much larger than Mansfield—are served by "all three" of the nation's great wire services.

And with the addition of International News Service, The News-Journal will be able to offer to its readers the work of some of the country's great newspaper writers, stars of the INS staff.

Holmes

Sentner

Let us introduce a few of them:

From foreign fields, for instance, will come stories written by H. R. Knickerbocker, brilliant roving correspondent, and winner of a Pulitzer prize for a series of stories on Russia in 1930.

From Washington, will come the authoritative and interpretive dispatches of George R. Holmes and George E. Durno. Holmes is chief of the INS Washington bureau, and recognized as one of the finest reporters and writers in Washington. Durno has the "White House beat." Wherever President Roosevelt goes, so goes Durno. He was in Miami when Zangara nearly shot the president, and he's on the job every day at the White House.

Gallico

Kilgallen

One of the aces of the INS staff is James L. Kilgallen, who has covered as many big stories as any reporter now in the business—and he's been in it for 30 years, and with INS for 16. He was on the Hauptmann case, and went to Greece to cover the Samuel Insull story. He has a daughter, Dorothy, who's a reporter (she made a flying trip around the world last year) and a good one. He'll write for The News-Journal, too.

Let's move over to the sports department for a moment.

First, there's Davis Walsh, who is INS sports editor, and one of the smartest, shrewdest and most entertaining sports writers in the business. He's been at it for years, but he hasn't lost his zest for sports. When you see a "By Davis Walsh" over a sports story, you'll want to read it.

Walsh

Walsh has a large staff, but none of them is any more brilliant than Pat Robinson. Robinson's a veteran, too, and an authority on anything he writes about.

From Walsh and Robinson then, you sport fans can expect to get a lot of enjoyment as you peruse The News-Journal sports pages in the future.

And now back to the news side of it all. Plenty of important news is breaking in far away corners of the world—in China and in Spain there are wars. And in both spots, International News Service has star men, backed by capable staffs, to bring the story to you.

House Leaders Map Swift Action on Roosevelt Request For 47 Fighting Ships, Planes

HEARINGS BEGIN MONDAY

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Leaders said today they expected the house to pass President Roosevelt's huge army and navy expansion program by Feb. 15.

Chairman Vinson (D., Ga.) called the house naval affairs committee to begin hearings Monday on a bill to authorize the $800,000,000 naval building program, and predicted a favorable report would be forthcoming after "two or three days."

The measure, carrying out Mr. Roosevelt's request for a 20 per cent increase in the navy's building limitations, would authorize 47 additional fighting ships, 22 auxiliaries and 1,000 airplanes. The president suggested that two battleships and two cruisers be started this year.

Chairman May (D., Ky.) of the house military affairs committee said he would confer immediately with war department officials to get their views on how best to fulfill the president's recommendations for strengthening land forces.

Bloc Maps Protest.

Members of a mid-western bloc in the house, however, indicated they would oppose the program. In this group were Representatives Tiegan (F. L., Minn.), Johnson (F. L., Minn.) and Witherow (Prog., Wis.)

Rep. Fish (R. N. Y.) said he believed the proposals involved an attempt to "police the world."

Navy officials disclosed that part of the $13,000,000 fund President Roosevelt recommended for experimentation with weapons for war might go for development of a "mosquito fleet," composed of small, speedy vessels carrying two torpedoes, small guns and a crew of eight or nine.

Vinson said that since Mr. Roosevelt took office, the navy has laid down keels of 119 warships and finished 49. The new

FEAR 450 DEAD OR INJURED IN POWDER BLAST

Italian Munitions Factory Shattered; Hunt Bodies in Smouldering Ruins.

KING HURRIES TO SCENE

300 Soldiers, 150 Workers Hurt; Smashing Of Air Tube Blamed.

SEGNI, Italy — Three terrific explosions shattered the powder section of the munitions factory here today, taking a heavy toll of life and injuring hundreds.

Premier Benito Mussolini arrived to take charge. King Victor Emmanuel also hurried to the scene from Rome.

Find 10 Bodies.

Ten bodies had been recovered by mid-afternoon but it was estimated that when the debris had been searched thoroughly the death toll would reach between 30 and 40. It was estimated 300 soldiers were slightly injured by glass and flying fragments, and approximately 150 factory workers injured, of whom some may die.

Frantically working rescue crews had been able to drag only the 10 bodies from the wreckage. Firemen believed many more would be found when they were able to penetrate the smouldering ruins.

The explosion was blamed officially on the carelessness of a workman who broke a compressed air tube. A communique announcing the disaster gave no definite casualty figures but said there were "some dead and dozens injured."

Stores of wool used in making high explosives were burning in the cellars and prevented further rescue work

Buildings Damaged.

Many persons were injured by flying splinters of glass and the tiles hurtled from the rooftops of neighboring buildings by the force of the blast.

Two minor explosions occurred at 7:35 a. m. and 7:50 a. m. before the huge blast at 8:03 a. m. as the day shift was relieving the night workers.

Segni, a town of 10,000 persons, 38 miles southeast of Rome, suffered widespread damage. Many roofs were shaken down and virtually all windows in the town were blown out. Merchandise was dumped all over the floors of stores as shelves collapsed.

Probe "Mystery" Death of Wife of Ohio Physician

COLUMBUS —(U.P.)— Franklin county authorities today sought to determine what caused the death of Mrs. Nelle McLaughlin, 34, wife of Dr. Paul R. McLaughlin of Danville, O., on the way to White Cross hospital here yesterday.

Coroner Edward E. Smith and Assistant Prosecutor T. Vincent Martin were to confer today with Prosecutor Ralph Bartlett.

Authorities learned that Dr. and Mrs McLaughlin had argued this week.

On Thursday, Martin was told Gerald Starkey of Columbus, a nephew of Mrs. McLaughlin, received a telephone call from her during which she said "All hell is breaking loose around here," and "I think I'll be dead in another hour."

Emmett Starkey, Mrs. McLaughlin's brother, and Gerald went to Danville Thursday evening and found her, apparently ill, lying on a couch. They said they were ordered by Dr. McLaughlin to take her and leave the house. Mrs. McLaughlin was brought to the home of a sister here and when her condition became worse, was taken to the hospital where she was pronounced dead.

Coroner Smith said chemical tests were being made

"All I care to say at this time is that I do not believe Mrs. McLaughlin just lay down and died," the coroner said.

Rockets to Fame With Stage Play

Overnight Success Sends $30-Week Teacher on Way to Riches.

GLASGOW, Scotland—(U.P.)—A gentle-mannered school teacher working among slum children of Glasgow and contentedly supporting his family on what he considers to be a comfortable income—$30 a week—seemed slightly bewildered today by news from New York that his play had rocketed overnight into fame and probably would yield a fortune for him.

The playwright is Paul Vincent Carroll; the play, "Shadow and Substance," which has just opened in New York to the thunderous acclaim of critics and immediately crowded houses.

The correspondent found the Irish teacher-playwright in the dingy old-fashioned Saint Joseph's boys' school, hidden in a gloomy tenement district, teaching division to 45 boys of seven to 10 years. He could not be interviewed until the lunch period of one hour.

We took a penny street car ride to a tenement flat almost as grimy as the school, which has been the home of Carroll and his wife and three daughters since he arrived from Dublin 17 years ago. In his "study," where books and papers were scattered right and left, there was a comfortabe armchair in which Carroll wrote "Shadow and Substance" and also his earlier play "The Things That Are Caesar's."

"Shadow and Substance," if it is as successful as its reception indicates, should normally bring its author as much as $800 to $1,000 a week in royalties aside from possible motion picture rights of perhaps $50,000.

Carroll is 37, slightly built and grey haired. He has a marked Irish brogue.

When his lunch hour was over we went back to the school where the children were milling about. Carroll remarked:

"I enjoy their company. It is a relief from the searching and questioning adult world."

WAITS TILL '40

Union Delays 3rd Term Action, Votes Lewis $13,000 Raise.

WASHINGTON —(AP)— The United Mine Workers will wait until 1940 to decide whether they want a third term for President Roosevelt.

The miners' convention reached that decision yesterday voting to defer action on a resolution endorsing another term for the president. At the same time they voiced approval of Mr. Roosevelt's program.

The delegates also voted to ask the union's top officers to accept the pay increase they refused at the 1936 convention.

That convention increased John L. Lewis' annual salary from $12,000 to $25,000, and boosted from $9,000 to $18,000 the pay of Philip Murray, vice president, and Thomas Kennedy, secretary-treasurer.

56th Birthday Finds Him Fit

The President
Fishing is his favorite form of relaxation.

By MORGAN BEATTY
(AP Feature Service Writer)

WASHINGTON — President Roosevelt has come through another hard year at the White House in excellent physical condition. Take that on the word of his personal physician

For the president it has been a year of unusual strain. He fought and lost the fight to enlarge the Supreme Court and watched the fanfare over the discovery that a former Klansman had accepted an appointment to the court.

Yet, says Dr. Ross T McIntire, White House physician, Mr. Roosevelt enters his 57th year in full vigor.

In that Dr. McIntire finds a lesson for all busy executives.

"Any normal executive can and should exercise regularly and moderately," he says, "and he should get away from routine as much as possible."

To what does Dr McIntire ascribe the president's physical stamina?

Dr. Ross McIntire
Guards F. D. R.'s health.

"First," says Dr. McIntire, "he has inherited an iron physique; second, infantile paralysis brought home to him the necessity of taking care of one's health; and, third, the president's daily routine exercises and swim keep him toned up."

The president's associates think one of the secrets of his constant health is his ability to forget the cares of the day when he hits the pillow at night. He sleeps like a top

City to Dance Again at President's Birthday Ball

Joins Nation Tonight In Honoring Roosevelt, Aiding In Fight Against Infantile Paralysis.

More than 1,000 Richland county residents are expected to attend a dance and party tonight at the Mansfield-Leland hotel in one of the 12,000 celebrations over the country honoring President Roosevelt on his 56th birthday anniversary. The annual observance is the fourth held in the city and nation.

Described as being "in robust health and just another year older," the president will greet the thousands of celebrants in a brief radio address at 11:30 p. m. He will speak from Washington and will include in his talk an expression of appreciation for the support the nation has given the infantile paralysis foundation.

Celebration Moved Up.

The president's birthday really falls on Sunday, but the nation-wide observance was moved up a day to permit the holding of dances and parties. Proceeds from the Richland county party, as from all others in the nation, will go to the national foundation to treat infantile paralysis cases and to prevent widespread epidemics of the withering disease.

For those who dance, the music at tonight's party will be provided by the Westinghouse swing orchestra, directed by Robert O. Richards. There will be a floor

CHANGES SHIFTS

Bates Moves Back Police Hours Effective Feb. 1.

A general order changing the hours of police department shifts was announced today by Police Chief Meade K Bates, and first shift officers ought to like it especially, because it will permit them to sleep an hour later in the morning.

The order, which takes effect Feb. 1, moves back the first shift starting time from 7 a. m. to 8, and the shift will end at 4 instead of 3. Hours of the other two shifts will also be changed. The second shift will work from 4 to midnight and the third shift from midnight to 8 a. m.

Bates said one reason for the change was to separate the closing hour of city banks and the shift change on the force. It will be the first change in shift hours since 1932, when the present setup was inaugurated by former Chief William A Lauer.

MAKE LIFE AN ADVENTURE, 88 GRADS URGED

Dr. Anspach Asserts You Must Be Enthusiastic If You Want To Achieve.

In an address filled with optimism and encouragement for modern youth, Dr. C. L. Anspach, president of Ashland college, urged the 88 members of Mansfield Senior high school mid-term graduating class last night to "make life an adventure."

Speaking before a near-capacity audience in Senior high auditorium, Dr. Anspach said "some people think of the world in a state of permanent disability, but if you achieve you must be enthusiastic and you must think of life in terms of an adventure."

Dr Anspach's topic was "Frontiers, Old and New." He was introduced by W. L. Miller, superintendent of Mansfield schools.

Says Work Just Beginning.

Asserting that "not all frontiers have been conquered, but the work is just beginning," he cited examples of great men of science, medicine and transportation who refused to be discouraged by the prophets with "distorted conceptions" who have predicted for generations that there is no opportunity for youth.

"Every day and age has been peculiar from some standpoint," Dr. Anspach said, "but I disagree violently with those who say this is a lost generation."

Expressing the opinion that the present confused economic picture is only temporary, he said the world is just beginning to conquer its handicaps and solve the Sales Tax Measure Would Plug $4,000,000 Leak.

COLUMBUS—(AP)—Out-of-state residents today found avoidance of the Ohio sales tax still legally possible but a little more difficult.

Under a new measure, signed into law by Gov. Martin L. Davey yesterday, non-residents will have to pay the state sales tax, just as residents do, but they may obtain refunds by making proper application to the state tax commission.

Previously they had to make only a statement to the merchant that they resided outside the state and the tax was waived But tax commission officials said this feature, known as the "Hicksville" provision, had been abused to the extent of about $4,000,000 a year

Youth Jailed in Cleveland, Says He's From Mansfield.

A man who told police he was from Mansfield, was held in the Cleveland city jail today following an attempt to rob a downtown Cleveland theater yesterday.

Cleveland police said he gave the name of Joe Ward, age 25, but later said his name was Joe Wardozo. Neither name is listed in the Mansfield city directory. He was captured by the manager of the theater and a pedestrian after he had commanded the cashier to "hand over the money or I'll shoot"

The cashier screamed and the youth who had his hand in his pocket as if he was carrying a gun, fled from the lobby. The manager who was passing the cashier's cage followed and was helped by the passerby. The would-be bandit was apprehended after a chase of a block.

Police said they found no firearms on his person

Mansfielders Favor Stronger National Defense, Survey Shows

Mansfielders are in favor of President Roosevelt's plan to increase the country's naval and air defenses, a cross-section survey conducted by The News-Journal today revealed.

Most of them emphasized, however, that any increase in the country's armed forces should be made solely for defensive purposes—indicating they opposed any possible use of naval or air strength away from the nation's boundaries.

There were a few who said they opposed an increase in armaments, feeling that more time and effort ought to be given to finding a permanent world economic adjustment program that would bring general disarmament, or opposing entering any "armament race."

But the majority of opinion seemed to be that since so many other nations were increasing their navy and army strength, that the United States could afford to do no less. They felt that military strength was needed to maintain respect for the United States in the eyes of other powers. Others pointed to our unpreparedness when we entered the World war in 1917, and while voicing the hope that we would not again go to war, felt that we should be prepared for any eventuality, in view of the wars that are now raging in various parts of the world.

Here are the comments of a number of Mansfielders:

MAYOR CLAUDE M. HUNTER—I don't feel that the United States is placing a chip on its shoulder by going ahead to build up a strong defense. With all the turmoil throughout the world it is obvious that we must prepare to amply defend ourselves against any encroachment on this country or any of its possessions. However, I am not in accord with any plan that might embarrass our government, by the protection of American capital on foreign soil. But I heartily agree with the president that our defense is inadequate for the best security of the nation."

GEORGE L. SATTERLEE, restaurant proprietor, 388 Springmill street I think it's a great idea—why should our nation, the greatest in the world, go defenseless while other countries are going ahead with huge armament programs? There is no reason why the United States should rate a third place navy, its only protection for Americans and American interests

GEORGE C. KYLE, realtor and councilman, 57 Penn avenue—We need to prepare a stronger national defense. With the longest coast line of any country in the world, we should have the largest navy. A strong national defense is the greatest protection that this country can offer its people and with all the unrest in foreign countries today we cannot afford to overlook the peace and security of our nation.

JESSE BEER, principal of the Senior high school—I am opposed to entering the armament race, and think that the money could be

REVIEW BOOK BY LEWIS AT STUDY CLUB SESSION

Mrs. C. D. Bancroft Presents Report: Mrs. Marquis, Mrs. McKenzie Discuss Current Events at Cosmopolitan Meeting.

MEMBERS of the Cosmopolitan club were guests of Mrs. Paul McConnell yesterday afternoon when the organization held the regular meeting and heard a discussion of current events and a book review. Mrs. C. D. Bancroft reviewed Sinclair Lewis' "The Prodigal Parents." Mrs. W. T. Marquis and Mrs. A. D. McKenzie presented the current topics.

The theme of "The Prodigal Parents" illustrates the revolt of the parents against the revolt of youth. Lewis pictures the comfortably situated middle class American family in his characters, Fred Cornplow, his wife, Hazel, and the children, Sarah and Howard.

In this novel, Fred's rebellion and the attitude of the children toward him is shown He is typically another George Babbitt. According to the report on this book the theme is weak and ineffectively presented and the book as a whole is inferior to his other novels.

Miss Amelia Piewitt, from Germany, who is a guest of Miss Florence Gernhardt, attended the meeting of the club. The next regular meeting of the group will be held at the Women's Club Feb 11 with Mrs. V. H. Lodde as hostess. Mrs. Paul McConnell and Mrs. D. P. Smith will present the program

Helen Broderick Knows Flowers

(By Central Press)

Helen Broderick stage and screen comedienne, long ago cast herself in a role which her public knows little of She is a digger. She likes to grub in her garden and pick and arrange her own flowers. As a result, Miss Broderick has learned much about flowers and can make the following suggestions.

Any type of flower will keep fresh longer if the stems are washed at night and placed in soapsuds, which must not touch the blossoms. In the morning, cut the stem ends, and place the flowers in fresh water to which a drop of ammonia has been added.

Miss Broderick prefers low center pieces on her dinner table; otherwise the guests are unable to see each other, she asserts She never uses strongly perfumed flowers for dinner decorations, as many people find the heavier scents unpleasant.

Not Too Many.

Particularly important, Miss Broderick advises against using too many flowers in one bowl She feels it is more attractive to see each bloom in its own perfection, rather than a bewildering mass of color. She also suggests that you study the colors under artificial light to avoid disappointment, as many pale flowers appear faded in candle light or under the glow of electricity.

One final suggestion from this well-known comedienne. Don't let the current rage in flowers rule you If you prefer pansies, cornflowers, or any old-fashioned posy, use them in your home. You will be happier, the effect will be just as good, and the cost considerably less, in the summer when such posies grow out of doors.

Swing It!

YOUTHFUL sophistication is achieved in this black taffeta "swing" frock worn by Patricia Wilder, young screen actress.

Delicate white lace edging at the V neck and short, puffed sleeves makes an effective bit of contrast. Stiffness is achieved in the puffed sleeves by means of large quilted squares, with the same treatment seen at the waist, where a deep triangularly shaped girdle ends in streamers which tie in the back.

A "beanie" of white felt draped with a black veil is worn with this dress. Patricia has chosen black accessories to wear with this costume

SATURDAY, JANUARY 29, 1938.

Drive carefully tomorrow—and pass the word along to that reckless driver who doesn't bother to read.

At any moment now, the telephone may ring and an excited voice will bring tidings that the first robin has been seen.

Now that Jim Braddock has staged a comeback at the ripe old age of 32, the problem of providing social security for impecunious prizefighters may become less acute.

Give Bates More Policemen.

NOW that some evidence is being seen of sincere efforts toward better law enforcement, people are more likely to be impressed by the frequently-repeated assertion that "Mansfield needs more policemen."

For a number of years in Mansfield there has been apparent justification for the belief that policing was being done in a rather lethargic way, under restraint of administration policies and in recognition of political or personal favoritism, rather than serving its intended purpose of fearless and impartial law enforcement.

The present seemingly conscientious attempt of Chief of Police Bates to enforce previously ignored laws, and to develop greater competency in the police department, merits public commendation and also deserves the co-operation that would be indicated by an increase in police personnel.

While it will probably be impossible to immediately finance the addition of seven men, as has been recommended by Chief Bates, it seems within reason to believe that at least three men could be added at once, with a further increase to come along as quickly as practicable.

Pennsylvania's Coal Dilemma.

GOV. GEORGE H. EARLE of Pennsylvania has a new solution for the problem of hard coal in that state. He wants the federal government to buy the anthracite fields. The natural answer is, "Hasn't the government enough trouble already?"

Pennsylvania is plagued with 95 per cent of the world's hard coal. In former years this was considered a great piece of good fortune, but the old standards are changing.

That coal is a vast deposit of great value to mankind. The trouble isn't with the coal but with some queer kink in our economic system which makes it difficult for owners and operators to produce and sell the coal at a profit. The governor says it has come largely from over-capitalization.

The situation is so bad that for years production has been largely in the hands of bootleg operators. They are mostly miners who formerly worked for the mining companies, and now get the coal themselves, taking and selling it, often with the tacit consent of the owners, because it is their only means of making a living.

A Distillery States Its Views.

THE ATTITUDE of distillers toward present loose methods of retail liquor selling is well illustrated by an advertisement of a long-established distillery in the current issue of a popular magazine.

Under the caption, "Pay Your Bills First," this advertisement says: "No person should spend a cent for liquor until the necessities of living are provided—and paid for. Bills for groceries, shoes, rent, light, heat, doctors—bills such as these should have the first call on America's payroll.

"We do not want to sell whisky to anyone who buys it at a sacrifice of the necessities of life. Whisky is a luxury and should be treated as such. Fine whisky can play a pleasing part in the scheme of gracious living, but only when taken in moderation and only after the bills are paid.

"This statement may seem contrary to our self interest. Actually it is not. As one of America's leading distillers we recognize a definite social responsibility. The very existence of legalized liquor in this country depends upon the civilized manner in which it is consumed."

These statements merit serious thought, as contrasted to the weak system of liquor control in Ohio and the lax way in which sale-by-the-drink licenses have been issued with apparent disregard of the character or responsibility of some of the licensees.

Don't Overtax Your Heart.

WITHIN the present week, from several cities, have come reports of heart attacks causing the death of middle-aged or elderly persons who over-exerted themselves while removing snow from walks or drives.

Many persons around middle age, who do not undergo regular physical examinations, are prone to some heart ailment without knowing of it, and any unusual exertion may bring serious, possibly fatal, results.

While the desire to clear away snow is admirable it is suggested as wiser procedure to have this done by some young person, rather than taking a chance on over-taxing the heart.

Reason for the Difference.

EVEN such a completely self-satisfied person as President Roosevelt could scarcely fail to have been impressed by the difference in public acceptance of his two Supreme Court appointees.

In the case of Stanley Reed, whose nomination was this week given Senate confirmation by unanimous vote without adverse criticism from any source, it was merely a matter of everybody appearing to realize that he was a proper man for the place.

With Hugo Black it was also a matter of everybody appearing to realize that he was NOT a proper man for the place.

More trouble in Hollywood—film stars having nervous breakdowns from worrying over their alimony.

At one time he was stigmatized as a "Peeping Tom"—now he is known as a candid camera addict.

Tourist note: Easy street has only a short stretch of smooth paving—then look out for deep ruts.

Waste of time: Trying to remember the name of the French premier.

It is probably some of the slow payers who put the stall in installment.

McIntyre's New York Day by Day

ONE of the disappointments in big city life is the lack of fires. During a quarter century in the metropolis, I have seen but one sizable conflagration. That was the famous Triangle holocaust with trapped sweat-shop girls swaying at windows and plunging to death on sidewalks below.

Out in Gallipolis we had dandy fires without casualties. The whole town poised in grip of expectancy at the first clap of the old bell in the Presbyterian church. Nobody thought of staying home, no matter the hour. Even the invalids came in wheel chairs.

Harry Maddy, of the Ohio Valley bank, is our leading buff and rarely missed a blaze. Each night to this day, they say, when the bell taps he jumps into his clothes, lightning-like, and is off, arranging his apparel on a chair at his bedside at bed-time to lose no time.

There was something of a Roman Holiday about fires on snowy winter nights. Water sprayed and clung in glistening icicles. Now and then a wall would sway and slowly fall to a collective "Ah-h!" Ab Adkinson would serve hot coffee good neighbors made. Everything free.

Our biggest fire was the night the furniture factory along the creek bank burned to the ground. Editor Sibley routed Mr. Lockwood at the telegraph office to send off an account to the city papers at 2 a. m. The fire started in the paint shop, then got into the wood turning section and spread to the surrounding lumber yards. At one time the heat was so intense it blistered the paint on Simeon Nash's porch a block away. Chuck Sweeney was hero of this one. He climbed a water pipe and saved papers out of Major Fuller's private office. Chuck later became a balloonist with a touring wagon circus, sailing upward and landing in nearby cornfields for $4 a voyage.

Hot arguments raged around the equally hot big-bellied stoves as to who was the best volunteer fireman. Most folk agreed it was between Hub Moots and Chet Rhodes. Moots was considered best in unreeling the hose and being the most accomplished squirter. But Gen. Lew Shires always contended Rhodes was "footiest on the ladder." All either got for such skill was a skull dent in Moots's head where hair would not grow. A falling brick nicked him at the Kerr hardware store fire.

There were usual suspicionings of fire-bugs after each blaze and many whispers. Dummy Trot, the deaf mute, was said to have set off several just to see the crowds and the fire wagons arrive. Anyway, it was thought strange a deaf person, such as he, was first to arrive. He was reported as having been seen by a number sneaking up the levee the night the Annie Q. Nelson burned to the river edge. When it was agreed the packet could not be saved, she was cut adrift and floated to mid-stream, lighting up the whole town and West Virginia hills. A sight to remember!

Then the time our frame cottage on Court street caught fire. "Hot air combustion in the attic," the Daily Tribune said. They sent to school for sister and me. And when one was told to go home by teacher after a messenger knocked at the door one knew it was something ominous. Outside we could hear the fire bell and see people rushing down Back Street and turning toward the river on Court. At McCormick's livery stable, Monk Welch, the weazened hostler, yelled: "Better hurry Bub, your grandma's house is a-burnin'. Sister turned oyster white and I was on the edge of a congestive chill, suddenly remembering sneaking up to the attic the day before to try out something new in corncob pipes.

Turning the corner, I saw Deck Burns, cook in Billy Schartz's saloon, carrying out our horse-hair sofa. Piled up near the hitching block were the crayon of Uncle Alex made the year he went to the World's Fair in Chicago—in case anything happened—the brass coal scuttle from the parlor and several other household furnishings. There was a thin trickle of smoke from the attic window. Grandma was across on Miss Nettie Frank's porch, as cool as anything. She was kneading bread dough when the boy who delivered the groceries appeared at the back door and shrieked "Fire!" It was over in a half hour. That evening all of us sat out on the front porch as usual. Life went on.

Congressmen Trying 'Oral Vaccine' Treatment

—By PRESTON GROVER

WASHINGTON—Congress is being guinea-pigged and doesn't seem to mind it.

It began when Dr. George W. Calver, physician for congress, hit upon an idea he thought would reduce the percentage of congressional sniffles. Congressmen don't sniffle more than the average run of citizens, perhaps not as much since they live a more sequestered life and the places where they work are air conditioned.

Yet a few were occasionally reporting up with eyes red from cold germs. So a while back Dr. Calver spent several weeks in a laboratory working on a cold preventive. There were several on the market and he experimented, refining a technique of his own which he felt certain would be harmless and likely beneficial.

Last session he took on volunteers, including a number of members of congress. His test group included 50. To them he began giving pills which come under the head of "oral vaccines" since you swallow them instead of having them scratched into your arm—or into your thigh if you are on the society side.

Each patient—including the members of congress—took one small white pellet daily, a half-hour before breakfast for a week. After that it was two a week.

More Than Mere Pills.

HIS experiment indicated the treatment was effective in about 80 per cent of the cases so this year he offered his idea to the world. Taking the tablet is only part of the job. You must follow health rules to help you out.

Last year Dr. Calver had little placards hung in each elevator in the capital and senate-house office buildings advising people to stay away from others with colds, to drink lots of water, avoid stuffy rooms, exercise plenty and avoid overeating and constipation. This year, he added to the list, the following:

"If you are susceptible to colds, see first aid room staff about new vaccine taken by mouth for the prevention of colds."

We tried to get him to let us publish the formula but he objected. He said it was not radically different from several "oral vaccines" on the market but he thought the job should be done under the direction of a physician. He told us that any physician wanting the formula could get it by asking.

Being a physician he could not reveal the names of members of congress who were taking the treatment, but commented:

"You would be surprised if I told you some who are."

Notes on Statesmanship.

SO-THAT'-HOW Note: "We southerners are a self-conscious, irritable minority and the southern politician is a master of appealing to his listeners by references to such things as southern womanhood, southern ideals, magnolia blossoms and plantation songs on the banks of the Mississippi." — Representative Maury Maverick of Texas, explaining how southern members stay in office so long.

Now-Now-Senator Note: Pastel-colored Senator Lewis of Illinois was introduced recently to the charming wife of a prominent member of the senate and after a moment of casual chatter back and forth he whispered in the lady's ear:

"When you go home, tell your husband I have met the woman who writes his speeches."

Listen, World!

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

Be Yourself.

I WAS never to see him again.

Clutching each other, we stood there, waiting on the lonely pier, my father and I—with the gray night closing over the marshes and the gray tide mumbling between the rotting piles.

A country child . . . ignorant, bewildered . . . going out alone into the unknown terrors of marriage and the vast wonder of a world she had never seen. I can feel my heart hammering yet, lurching in great thumps against young ribs . . . the unaccustomed weight of my long hair, "done up" for the first time . . . the pride in the bulging "telescope basket" at my feet.

But, clearest of all, I can see the tear-dimmed dearness of his face . . . the friendly comfort of his broken hands. My father! Of all the gallant heroes I have ever known, you stand most tall and shining. And yet the world saw only one more poor man, in a ragged coat . . . who spent his scanty dimes and failing breath for others' needs.

The twilight deepened. Around the bend there came the train's long, wavering wail. A sea gull screamed . . . a brakeman crossed the track, his lantern lit. And then . . . my thin young arms were clinging to his neck. Frantic, I sobbed for him to let me stay—and felt him gulp and tighten, fighting for the thing to say . . . those words which were the only gift he had, to set me on my way. The wail again. His quivering face on mine. And then—

"No, darling, you must go. That's life. We must go onward—if we want to live. I wish I'd something that would make it easier, dear. You'll meet so many things that will seem cruel or queer. And you're so young, untrained—people will laugh and sneer. You're headstrong, too—people will hurt and hate. But here's one rule — JUST KEEP THE BALANCE STRAIGHT WITH YOUR OWN SELF! No one but God can tell you what is right or wrong, but this will help you as you go along—BE YOUR OWN SELF . . . THE BEST AND BRAVEST SELF THAT YOU KNOW HOW TO BE — STAND TIGHT!"

And then he'd gone—

And I was whirling onward through the night.

A handful of words thirty years ago. But in all my life I'd heard no deeper wisdom . . . clutched no higher truth.

BE TRUE TO YOUR OWN SELF!

KEEP YOUR OWN BALANCE STRAIGHT!

Don't fear . . . don't crawl . . . don't copy or cringe or jump in circles for the other fellow.

BE YOUR OWN ORIGINAL SELF!

You weren't born bad and warped, vile and crooked. You were born RIGHT—in the image of all rightness.

TRUST THAT RIGHTNESS WHICH IS IN YOU.

TRUST YOUR OWN FINENESS, ALTHOUGH OTHERS LAUGH.

TRUST YOUR OWN COURAGE, ALTHOUGH OTHERS SCOFF!

TRUST YOUR OWN COME-BACK, EVEN THOUGH THE WHOLE WORLD SAYS YOU'RE A HOPELESS FOOL.

TRUST—AND STAND TIGHT!

AND BE THAT BEST AND BRAVEST SELF THAT YOU WERE MEANT TO BE!

The Coming Season.

These fine winter days, while appreciated by a soot and cloud-wearied population for their own sake, increased the itch for spring with which most of us have been bothered.

The surest indication of this mounting eagerness is the restlessness being displayed by housewife and backyard gardener. She is awaiting impatiently the day that she can tear the house upside down from top to bottom and tackle the winter's accumulated dinginess in a vigorous spring housecleaning campaign. He is already poring over the seed catalogs and measuring off with his eye exactly where the tomatoes will go.

There is nothing finer or more inspiring than the neatness and the cleanliness of a residence. A little paint, newly-papered room, a bit of new furniture, airy spring curtains, a garden flower or vegetable—all add that something to a dwelling which makes it attractively habitable.—Columbus Dispatch.

How It Started

—By JEAN NEWTON

"Wheels in the Head."

Used jocularly to describe a person with a pet obsession or other evidence of mental instability, the expression "wheels in the head" is not just chance American slang.

"Wheels in the head" is apt, logical and within the ken, perhaps, of our personal experience; for have we not all had thoughts occur and recur, come and go intermittently, the cycle persisting, the idea being gone over and over?

The expression also has the sanction of literary usage, as in that old classic "Don Quixote," whence possibly we borrowed it.

Here, Sancho Panza, after getting the worst of an encounter with a windmill, remarks:

"God bless me. Did not I tell your worship that they were only windmills and no one could have made any mistake about them but one who had something of the same kind in his head?"

As Others See It

Simple Economic Lesson.

Money must go to work before men can go to work. Just think it through. There is no job for you until some one's money makes that job. — Fairmont (Minn.) Sentinel.

Paying The Way.

A Democratic member of congress predicts that within twenty years Washington will have a population three times its present size. The estimate is conservative. Just leave it to new governmental agencies and jobholders.—Kansas City Times.

DAILY BIBLE THOUGHT

GOD FREELY GIVES: He that spared not his own Son, but delivered him up for all, how shall he not with him also freely give us all things.—Romans 8:32.

What One Man Thinks

—By DAVID GIBSON

Much solo tenor singing is vocal necking.

A good merchant is more afraid of an over-charge than a loss.

Plutocratic club in the average large city—few lights burning in the common rooms even upon dark days and in order to save electric current—cold-eyed, worried old gentlemen lounging about, short-cropped mustaches, untrimmed back hair, trousers that do not match in cloth pattern their coats and vests, eating frugal snacks, drinking blended whisky, smoking nickel cigars and all cussing Roosevelt—for a business depression brought on by their own class.

Picketing.

I AM not a lawyer, but it would seem to me, in all common sense and simple justice, that if a man rents a piece of property on a public street, for the conduct of an honorable, socially useful business, and in all ways lives up to the law and ordinances, that he is entitled to the peaceful possession of that property.

And it would also seem to me that somewhere along the lines of courts of appeals a judge could be found, free from political influence, to take this common sense view and apply restraint, enforced if necessary, against any action to the contrary.

Crosby's restaurant, out in the Euclid Ave. and E. 105th district of Cleveland, has been developed through the years by the hard work and savings of the proprietor and his wife, from a very humble beginning.

It has enjoyed a large patronage of the very best cross section of society—neither rich nor poor, and the institution has prospered.

It pays better than the market rate of wage to 47 employes and there have never been any differences as to compensation, hours or working conditions.

Since October 4th, last year, this place has been picketed with more or less disorder, interspersed by stench bombs thrown into the restaurant, the home of the proprietor and those of his more frequent patrons.

No labor dispute, understand—just an attempt on the part of a labor organization to obtain a part of the wages of these workers in the way of initiation fees and dues, subtracted from their pay by their employer and paid over to the union in the way of a "checkoff" system.

I am for men and women who work—first, last and all the time. I am for union when they are for the worker, but not when they attempt to collect money from workers for union revenue only, and particularly when they destroy, or attempt to destroy a decent market place of work and wages.

Deems Taylor.

"OF MEN AND MUSIC," by Deems Taylor, is a new book well worth reading, particularly by students in any form of musical expression.

The high spot in this work is the first chapter, "The Monster." Nameless until well along towards its close, he describes a certain character—personally about all that he should not be—large head, small body, sickly; lived most of his life upon borrowed money that he did not repay; made love to the wives of his hosts, stole the wife of his best friend and before marrying her sought a union with a widow of wealth. He was a gigantic egotist and exhibitionist, thought himself Socrates, Shakespeare, Bach and Beethoven—all in one. Played his musical compositions in a miserable piano technic to the foremost pianists of his time and sang to great vocal artists in a crow-like voice.

Biggest bore imaginable—talked about himself continuously for hours—when others wanted to talk about themselves.

Late in the chapter, this character turns out to be Richard Wagner.

And then Deems Taylor acknowledges that Wagner had absolutely been right in his own evaluation of himself and in all that he had thought and said and done; that he had absolutely been justified in proclaiming himself to be the greatest musician of his time.

It is my personal opinion that "Die Meistersinger" is the most colossal single musical work—in musicianship, counterpoint, intellect, poetry, emotion, sarcasm, humor, comedy and wholesome and beautiful romanticism—ever to come from the brain and heart of any human being. It is the quintessence of all of Wagner's music, perhaps the Ultima Thule for musicians of coming generations.

There have been more lives written of Richard Wagner than Napoleon—or will be. I have read many of them, and this summary of his life and character by Deems Taylor is not only a masterpiece of analysis, but as a literary composition.

Another high spot in this book is the chapter, "New Romantics." A poet often has a vision of material problems with which we of more material pursuits are not blessed. And Deems Taylor is a poet, at least in the sense of a musical composer of recognition—and music is the origin of poetry. In this chapter he "feels" the economic destiny of labor-saving machinery—what Adam Smith saw and understood in his "Wealth of Nations," and tried to explain in his dull, stupid, uninteresting way.

Deems Taylor has "pulse" to his writings—a very rare quality, and he should make a study of political economy with a view of presenting the subject to readers in his attractive, interesting way.

Such writers are needed in this field; for there is not going to be much more musical art, or any art—nothing but discord, disturbance and strife, until we measurably improve our social-economic state.

Judge Florence Allen.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT should appoint Judge Florence Allen, now of the Federal Court of Appeals, Cincinnati, to the next vacancy on the United States Supreme Court bench.

Aside from the fact that women are entitled to representation on every judicial body, as a matter of direct material justice, a woman's point of view is desirable from a public standpoint—both for men and women.

A woman would be a mighty desirable leaven in the body of last judicial appeal. Women, in their natural instincts, have a better sense of justice than men in seeing the household, the home, as the fundamental unit of business and general prosperity, a sense of human rights over property rights, rather than regarding men, women and children as pawns of speculative profit.

Judge Allen is well known in northern central Ohio where she has been personally active in many movements of major civic betterment, including the democratic and common justice campaign for women's suffrage—and all long before any of her judicial positions.

Aside from her natural genius for the law, aside from her long judicial experience, she has made a complete study of the science of political-social economy and views it in its full, democratic sense.

To those in judicial positions, a knowledge of political-social economy is eminently desirable, both now and in the future, and upon which most men in public life are woefully ignorant.

In the matter of a purely technical knowledge of the law, Judge Allen is equal to any present member of the United States Supreme Court, with the possible exception of three, and all these are now very old men.

Judge Allen has better than a technical knowledge of the law; she has a sense of economic justice and the emotional will and desire to apply it for the benefit of the average man and woman.

ASHLAND PAYS OFF BONDS FOR COUNTY ROADS

Courthouse Debt Only Major Indebtedness Remaining, Commissioners Say.

ASHLAND—With the Ashland county road debt retired, Ashland county commissioners met here Friday afternoon to consider annual appropriations. The courthouse bonds are the only remaining major county debt.

Included in their appropriations at the meeting was the one which finished the final payment on the interest and the principle on this county's debt on roads. It was pointed out that in the past, this one item alone, has accounted for a huge slice of the annual funds.

It was pointed out by the commissioners that last year, all the debt for the county bridges were eliminated, and that the last of the debt on county roads was paid in 1935. This year, all bonds on state highways and bridges in this county will be retireed.

The only major debt remaining is the county courthousee bond, which the commissioners said would require comparatively small sums for retirement.

A Farmer's Diary

January 28.

MY grandfather was a strong man, a farmer, a pioneer. He made a road up the hill with his ax and his ox team, and built his log house at the top because he liked the view. His work was hard, his team was slow, but after a long and busy life, he left to my father a few fertile, cleared acres, and a little church and schoolhouse.

In his day, the road up the hill was widened and the trees on either side cleared away. He built his frame home near the center of his widening acres, within sight and sound of the church and schoolhouse at the crossroad. Here he reared a large family, taking his children over the muddy road, at the call of the week-day or Sabbath bells, with his team and wagon, or in the family surry.

Today my wife and I took a short drive in our motor car—over this same road, which was widened and graded last fall. At the foot of the hill we saw where modern road-making machinery had gouged a deep cut. The road was wide and smooth enough for our car to float along.

We passed the church and the schoolhouse, and paused, as we like to do, to get the hilltop view. There it lay—miles and miles of snowclad Black Fork valley, waiting for spring. From the horizon, an aeroplane rose, swooped for an instant above the tree tops, and began to climb.

At that moment the sun came out. It touched the hills, the schoolhouse, the church spire—glinted white upon the wings of the soaring plane.

We drove on slowly, in silence. It seemed somehow, as though a voice had spoken. And we were moved, and humble.

fills the vacancy caused by the death of Miss Mary Scior, and Service-Safety Director Tracy C. Styert, who becomes an ex-officio member by virtue of his office. The new member of the advisory board is Mrs. Frank B. Black, who succeeds her late husband.

Dr. Fonkalsrud read the annual report of the board which included financial and other statistics for the past 12 months ending Dec. 31, 1937.

He said that a total of 3,540 patients had been cared for in the hospital last year, 398 more than in 1936.

Births during the year totaled 589, an increase of 114 over 1936. In 1936 there were 475 births in the institution. Operations performed numbered 1,695, as compared with 1,323 in 1936. Accident cases decreased from 447 in 1936 to 430 in 1937.

Average Cost Rises.

The average daily cost per patient per day for 1937 was $5.53, six cents more than the cost in 1936, which was $5.47. The increase was due to the increase in prices of foods, and other necessary equipment, Dr. Fonkalsrud said.

The superintendent told the board that the hospital was still in need of additional beds to relieve crowded conditions in the wards, and that the hospital kitchen needed to be enlarged to cope with present conditions.

The board also considered the suggestion of Dr. Fonkalsrud to hire a pathologist for the hospital. Applications for the position are now being interviewed.

Members of the hospital board, including the new members are, Mrs. E. R. Brown, C. W. Fuchs, L. A. Ott, W. O. Frye, E. M. Olin, Matthew Mayer, Judge C. H. Huston, M. Dale Ward, Robert Black, Ross A. Glessner, Fred Burgener, Tracy C. Styert, Mrs. E. R. Hartman, D. O. Meese, and E. B. Swigart.

The senate will consider a conference report on the Wagner housing bill Monday. This measure, designed to stimulate residential building, has passed both houses but changes must be voted on.

Both senate and house were in recess today and southern senators held a caucus to review their fight against the anti-lynching bill. The southerners considered their battle won when the senate voted Thursday against limiting debate on the measure.

Senator Wagner (D., N. Y.) reiterated, however, he would seek to keep the bill before the senate until it comes to a vote.

FACES PROBLEM

Court Puzzled Over Where To Send Girl On Sentence.

Refused by the Delaware industrial school for girls because of her age, and believed too young for the Marysville reformatory for women, Miss Esther Eubanks, 18, colored, Mansfield, was held in the county detention home today while court officials attempted to find a place for her to serve her sentence.

Pleading guilty to a charge of assault and battery following an attack on Mrs. Jerome Hecht at the county relief office Jan. 10, the girl was ordered committed to the Delaware institution by Judge C. J. Anderson in juvenile court.

At the time of the attack Miss Eubanks was only 17, but before she was sentenced this week she observed her 18th birthday.

As juvenile authorities prepared to take her to Delaware today, word came from the Delaware industrial school that she would not be accepted.

Buckley said Souther was assaulted at Danvers State hospital on Dec. 21 by another patient.

Buckley's investigators found 424 patients died from other than natural causes in Massachusetts mental hospitals between 1926 and 1936.

Newspapermen Await Arrival of Terry; Brooklyn Signs Tempermental Mungo

By GEORGE KIRKSEY

NEW YORK—(U.P.)—Bill Terry arrives here today for his first meeting with the "gentlemen of the press" since his magazine article, "Terrible Terry," unloaded both barrels on them.

Terry is returning under cover and every effort to determine what train he was aboard proved unsuccessful.

Every newspaper in Manhattan and Brooklyn—10 in all—and the three press associations have assigned their baseball writers to interview Terry. It will be a tough spot for tactless Terry who'll face a barrage of questions concerning just what he meant by those pot shots at the inmates of the press box.

Terry's mission is to attend the International league meeting as a representative of the Giants' Jersey City farm club. He also will also confer with Horace Stoneham, president of the Giants, on several matters, one an invitation from Honolulu to train in Hawaii in 1939.

While a renewal of Terry's battle with the press impends, the Brooklyn Dodgers made a grand slam toward straightening their internal affairs by signing Van Lingle Mungo, their temperamental pitching ace to his 1938 contract at a salary reported to be $15,000 or $16,000.

The signing took place last night in Columbia, S. C., where Mungo went to meet Larry MacPhail, the Dodgers' new and hustling vice-president. Although Mungo had flatly stated he'd never don another Brooklyn uniform as long as Burleigh Grimes managed the club, he signed in "less than 60 seconds," according to MacPhail and is bent on winning "his rightful place as baseball's greatest pitcher."

THE cage quintets of Ontario, Madison, Plymouth and Lexington will open the annual Richland county high school Class B basketball tournament Friday, Feb. 19, W. A. Wickline, principal of Lexington high school, tournament manager, announced today.

The drawings for the preliminary games were held a week ago at a meeting of principals, Wickline said, but the pairings for the first night games will not be made until later.

Shiloh, Adario, Union, Butler, Bellville and Lucas, other tournament entrants, will not play until Thursday, Feb. 24. The winners of the Feb. 19 games will also play this night to provide a program of four contests.

Play On Two Floors.

All games will be played at Mansfield high school except the consolation series which will be staged at Lexington Friday, Feb. 25.

A foul shooting contest will follow the semi-finals. Each school will be permitted to enter two non-playing students in the contest, Wickline stated.

Roy B. Clymer of Elyria and R. Don Clymer of Findlay, who are brothers, have been appointed officials. The former is athletic director of Elyria high school, while the latter is football coach at Findlay high.

200 Teams Expected For Moose Tourney

AN ENTRY of more than 200 teams is expected for the annual national bowling tournament of the Loyal Order of Moose to be staged at the Meder Recreation alleys in March.

The deadline for entries will not be reached until Feb. 15, but a number of lodges have already applied for dates, D. D. Renner, manager of the tournament, announced today.

The first entry was filed by the Cambridge lodge a week ago, and additional entries have been received from other Ohio orders since, Renner states.

Ohio is expected to furnish approximately 100 teams for the tournament, which was held in Chicago last year. The out-of-state entry is also expected to surpass the century mark.

Ft. Wayne, South Bend and Chicago will provide the bigger entries from outside of the state, Renner believes.

The tournament, which will be run on a handicap basis, will be rolled on week-ends, with the first shift scheduled Saturday, March 4.

The Mansfield lodge has entered eight teams in the competition.

Ontario Again Tips Butler To Regain Undisputed Lead

Coach Kibler's Warriors Rally In Second Half to Edge Bulldogs, 24-22, In Thrilling Game; Madison Wallops Union.

By CHARLES MARTIN

THE once-beaten Warriors of Ontario high are the undisputed owners of first place in the hectic Richland county basketball league race today.

Riding along, deadlocked with Butler high for the leadership, the Ontarioans met their chief rivals last night on the home court before an estimated crowd of 800 fans, and came through with a thrilling second-half rally to edge the invaders, 24 to 22.

The victory, No. 8 for Coach Orville Kibler's proteges, placed the club in an excellent spot to again annex the championship it won last season.

Trailing, 10 to 12, at halftime, the Warriors, paced by Prion, started hitting the net from all angles to hop into a lead they never relinquished.

The clubs played on even terms in the opening chapter and the stanza ended with the score tied at 6-all. The Bulldogs rallied and at the half way mark moved into a two-point advantage.

But at this point Ontario came into its own and after taking a 16 to 15 lead in the third quarter, outscored its rivals, 8-7, to win.

Little Kenny Miller kept Butler in the game by collecting 11 points as he set the individual pace. Prion slipped 10 through the net to top the winners. Matt Hager and Dick Casad tallied five apiece to follow Prion in the scoring column.

The Ontario seconds made a clean sweep of the program by defeating Butler, 10 to 9, in a nip-and-tuck preliminary attraction.

Madison high's sharpshooting Rams strengthened their hold on third place in the Richland county league race last night by drubbing Union, 33 to 16, on the Union high court.

After a nip-and-tuck opening half, the Rams, led by Bill Wilkins, found the range to win going away. The Madison aggregation outscored Union, 24 to 10, after the intermission. The victory left the Rams trailing the leaders by two games.

Union, battling to chalk up its second league triumph, held the Rams in check with its sparkling defense in the opening half, but was unable to cope with the shooting of Wilkins. Doug De Nero and Joe Miller after the rest period. The setback was No. 8 for Union.

Coach Al Fendrick's athletes hopped into a 4 to 2 lead in the first quarter and never trailed. At the half the Rams were leading, 9 to 6.

Going into the third stanza the Madison cagers turned on the power and marched to a 22 to 12 advantage as the clubs resumed play in the final period.

Wilkins collected 11 points to set the individual pace, while DeNero and Miller tallied nine apiece. Bowser topped the losers with eight.

The Madison reserves defeated Union, 20 to 13, in the prelim.

With France leading the way, the Minutemen hopped into an early lead which it held until the final stanza. Led by Crawford, who dumped in 11 points, the Lucas cagers broke loose with a scoring spree to take the decision.

Lexington grabbed a 21 to 19 lead at the half and finished the third stanza with the score deadlocked at 29-all.

Plans Selective Draw For State Tourney

COLUMBUS—(U.P.)—A selective draw, such as has been used for the past two years, will be employed again this season in making pairings for the annual state scholastic basketball tournament, it was announced here today by H. R. Townsend, commissioner of the Ohio High School Athletic association, following a meeting of the group's board of control.

The draw, designed to prevent two teams from the same district meeting in the first round, was first used in 1936 and followed successfully again last year.

CHAPTER XV.

She was eager to talk to that young woman, but did not wish her to suspect it. There was something very naive and unsophisticated about that little Miss Vardell, but Gerta was not satisfied that it was as genuine as it appeared. The girl from Oklahoma had a way of saying things that suggested a quick and subtle understanding; she also had a rather disconcerting way of regarding one with those serious brown eyes, eyes with depths that might conceal—anything.

Gerta was both restless and worried.

Terry had dropped into see her before starting on his trip to Milwaukee, but his stay had been brief and unsatisfactory. He was much preoccupied and, apparently, anxious to be on the road. Gerta was aware that he had been worrying over business affairs of late, but he seemed different this time. Unwilling to discuss matters in his usual confidential way. It was true that he made the accustomed promises about calling on long distance or writing, keeping her informed of his whereabouts and plans. He always did that — sent flowers, too, if his absence was to be of several days' duration.

That was a week ago. There had been no phone calls and no letters. No flowers.

Gerta prided herself upon her ability to meet any situation with a show of indifference, but these past few days had proved a severe test for her habitual poise. And, for some reason, her thoughts kept reverting to Caradad Vadell.

She told her over and over that Caradad's appearance in Chicago was nothing more than a coincidence. She knew Terry well enough to be assured that his surprise at seeing his former neighbor was unaffected. If it were true that he had been completely out of touch with her since coming to the city, there never could have been anything serious between the two of them in the old days. The girl was too young. And, besides, Caradad Vardell was not the type that would appeal to Terry Cantine. If there were such a woman, she would have to make that interest materially worth Terry's while.

But a worrying uncertainty lurged in Gerta's mind. Terry had been so unreservedly glad to see the girl from the South; it had been so evident in everything he said about her. And he had exhibited a possessiveness that would have been ludicrous under any other circumstances. He must have regretted leaving the city while she was there, perhaps enough to take her into his confidence about the date of his return. Gerta might have imagined it, but she felt that her own frequent calls to Terry's hotel had met with suspiciously stereotyped responses.

It should not be difficult to satisfy herself upon a few points after an luformal chat with Caradad.

"So good of you," was her smiling greeting to the guest, as she led the way into her dainty bedroom. "You know it's really an imposition to extend the hospitality of this little place — so sketchy, of course. But at least it's a place to sleep. My friends seem to conspire to keep me away from it most of the time."

"But I think it's charming," was Caradad's sincere response from before the dressing table's mirror where she was giving sundry little touches and pats to her new wave. Within reach of her hand was a large photograph of Terry in a swing frame. A slight smile touched her lips when she remembered that she, too, had a picture of Terry on her dresser at the Rushmore. So.

"Oh, I manage after a fashion," Gerta admitted carelessly, "though my one maid and I have trouble in keeping out of each other's way when we both are here. But come out to the other room and be comfortable. May I mix you a cocktail before dinner?"

Caradad did not in the least desire a cocktail, but a sudden little perverseness made her accept the invitation with a show of nonchalance. It was rather childish, but she was forced to admit that she did not wish to give Gerta Greenway any advantage. If she could help it.

"I'm so sorry that you have not been feeling well," was her further contribution to her hostess when she was seated in a low chair and Gerta was pouring two exact jiggers of whisky from a squat bottle at a nearby coffee table.

"Oh, I really haven't been ill." Mrs. Greenway assured her as she went on mixing the cocktails. "I think it was only a touch of cold — just enough to make one feel perfectly wretched and out of sorts. And to stay indoors," she added.

"I know," Caradad sympathized. "And the weather is so gorgeous."

If Gerta had admitted that her seclusion had been influenced by a desire to remain within sound of the telephone, listening for the one call that did not come, Caradad could have sympathized with her on that score, too. Instead, Gerta was coming to her with the two cocktails on a tiny tray and saying brightly, "I do hope these are right. And what is all this I am hearing about you and one of our town untouchables?"

"Whom do you mean?" Caradad asked in surprise. She took her glass, but held it in her hand.

"John Severance, of course. My dear, he's one of the men everybody tries to cultivate—and so few succeed. He is a recluse, really. And so famous a globe trotter and scientist. But I dare say that you know more about him by this time than I could possibly tell you. But he is most charming and you are favored. He's supposed to be very wealthy."

"I know very little about him," Caradad admitted indifferently, "except that he is fond of pictures and books. He was kind enough to show me the Art Institute one afternoon. I met him at Mt. Tankersley's and..."

"I know! Wasn't that too priceless? Imagine! The great John Severance sitting all by himself in the next room while we were having our little party ...and you were the one to find him! I must admit I was quite chagrined when Terry told me about it. You can't expect to be very popular with your new women friends after this." She laughed merrily.

"I'm sure they have no great cause to worry," Caradad decided. She was thinking more about Gerta's admission that it was Terry who had told her of that visit in Nick's library and of the invitation that followed. Gerta had seen Terry since she had, it appeared.

"I do hope your cocktail is all right," her hostess suggested, as if the same thought might have entered her mind. She had not meant to speak of Terry yet.

"It's very nice." Caradad told er, after a languidly heroic sampling of the drink. Fortunately, the maid appeared just then from the hall and announced that dinner was served. Caradad took another and seemingly endless swallow and got to her feet with a horrible fear that she was going to "feel" her drink. If only she could get something in her stomach quickly enough...

The dinner began with a comforting hot soup. And Mrs. Greenway entertained with a sprightly conversation that necessitated nothing more than smiling interest and a surreptitious devotion to her food. For a moment, her soup plate had shown a tendency to evade the approach of her spoon. Now it had become stationary.

In the spontaneity of her hostess' chatter was a trifle forced. Caradad lost sight of it in a thankful attempt to bring her facilities to their usual composure. And Gerta's talk, which had reverted again to the party, was amusing. Particularly her account of the Captain Kentons....the dear old fellow was so terribly jealous. And there was Mayme Bryson. She was becoming just a bit trying these days.

"Nothing against gaming, my dear, we all do it. But when one makes a business of contract — drags it into drawing-rooms — that's overdoing it of course."

And dear Nick Tankersley — really a dear, when one knew him. A pity that a certain group of hangers-on used him so shamelessly, but he didn't seem to mind. And he could afford it, heaven knew. There was a serious side to Nick, but he seldom displayed it. Too bad the poor chap had a weakness for drink. However...

Terry Cantine was studiously avoided until the coffee was served when Gerta mentioned his name irrelevantly, dropping it into the conversation gently like the bit of sugar that went into her demitasse. Then she broke the sudden silence with a casual, "I dare say you miss him these days."

There was no reason for it, but Caradad realized that instinctively she was on guard. Realized that there was something she had been waiting for, that she must match the oter woman's air of indifference — better it. With studied carelessness, she replied, "Oh, yes."

"He was so disappointed — when he found his trip was going to be longer than he expected."

"I know."

It was not the answer Gerta hoped for. And, to make matters worse, there was that guileless disinterestedness in those big brown eyes watching her. She covered her momentary disappointment with an apologetic smile.

"My dear, I didn't think. Perhaps you prefer your coffee with cream. May I get you some?"

"No thank you." That was said carelessly, too. But there was a little glint in the brown eyes. It was unnoticed by Gerta who cast her caution aside. She rested her white arms on the table and leaned nearer her guest with a gesture of confidential frankness.

"Miss Vardell, I'm dreadfully worried about Terry."

"You mean you are afraid he may have met with an accident?" Caradad inquired innocently.

"Oh, no! No indeed. He's quite all right—physically. You are such a good friend of his. . . . Well. Terry is worrying over something. You must have noticed it lately."

"No, I haven't. Business, I suppose."

"I suppose you haven't. The poor boy has been so anxious for you to have a pleasant visit—but he talks matters over with me quite confidentially. We had a long visit just before he went away and I . . . I was just a little alarmed. I couldn't tell this to any one else."

"Yes?" was the quiet rejoinder.

"He was blue, depressed. And he didn't wish to admit it. But I know him so well that I was—just a little frightened, "Gerta, repeated impressively.

"Why?" Caradad asked bluntly.

"Because it's so utterly unlike Terry. I've always said I never knew a man with such—well, iron nerves. And he's naturally gay and careless. You know that. He's been very different of late . . . oh, very. When a man like Terry takes to brooding, it's a dangerous sign. I mean it."

There was something almost wistful in the large dark eyes fixed on Caradad's.

"Dangerous?" the younger woman echoed wonderingly.

Gerta's answer was a question. Spoken impulsively, "Hasn't Terry told about—me?"

SET FOR SNOW

County Buys Huge Maintainer for Roads, Costs $4,300.

Richland county's snow-fighting equipment will be supplemented soon by a huge Motor patrol maintainer which county commissioners had ordered today from the Taylor Tractor company, Columbus.

The Diesel-powered maintainer will replace a road grader which will be traded in on the new machine. Price of the maintainer is $4,315, less $325, the trade-in value of the old grader.

County Engineer Howard C. Sword said the tractor-grader, weighing nearly 10 tons, is built specially for snow removal work, but will be used as a general maintainer. It will be delivered in about two weeks, he said.

STOCK PRICES MIXED DURING QUIET TRADING

Statisticians Note Favorable Sign In Retail Figures Of Reserve Board.

NEW YORK—(AP)—Early stock market prices were slightly mixed today in exceptionally quiet dealings.

Up fractions to a point or so at the opening were American Can, Southern Railway, Standard Oil of N. J., Loew's, Chrysler and Bethlehem.

Down as much were J. I. Case, Allis Chalmers, Douglas Aircraft, U. S. Steel, General Motors and American Telephone.

Market statisticians saw a favorable sign in figures of the federal reserve board indicating retailers throughout the country had achieved substantial progress in whittling down inventories accumulated last spring.

The reserve board index disclosed that department store stocks on hand at the end of December were only slightly more than 1 per cent greater than at the close of 1936, while several months earlier they averaged 17 per cent larger than in the preceding year.

CITY TO DANCE AGAIN TONIGHT

Joins In Honoring President On Birthday And In Fight Against Paralysis.

show in charge of Miss Marguerite Speas, the Mansfield dancing instructor, whose novelty dance acts made a hit at the Muster-Cheers Christmas show at the Ohio theater several weeks ago.

Others at the Mansfield party who do not dance will find amusement in cards and games. Tickets are still available at $1.50 per couple or $1 for singles. They will be sold at the hotel tonight.

The county committee, headed by John F. Correll, president of the Richland County Young Democratic club, has worked for nearly a month on plans for the party. Atty. Marshall C. Moore is heading the committee in charge of general arrangements for the party, while Mrs. Louise Reese is in charge of ticket sales and Arden Strang has handled publicity.

Both the Western Union and Postal Telegraph systems are cooperating with the birthday ball committees by contributing all proceeds from birthday greeting messages to the president to the infantile paralysis foundation.

For 25 cents, the following message can be sent: "Greetings, I am giving the sum of 25 cents to join with you (President Roosevelt) in the great fight against infantile paralysis to which you have given your leadership and lent your birthday."

'Old Gang' With President.

President and Mrs. Roosevelt will observe the anniversary tonight surrounded by old friends known as the "cuff links" gang. The "gang" is made up mostly of men and women who went through the 1920 campaign with the president who was then a candidate for vice president with James M. Cox of Ohio.

The president's mother, Mrs. James Roosevelt, will be the guest of honor at a party in New York where 14 dance orchestras will play.

The president's wife invited a group of movie stars to the White House for luncheon today. In the party are Fredric March, Joe E. Brown, Eleanor Powell, Janet Gaynor and Louise Fazenda. Mrs. Roosevelt, accompanied by the five actors and actresses, will make a whirlwind visit at each of the seven birthday balls being held in the national capital tonight.

JAP FREIGHTER UNDER GUARD

Police Take Precautions As Liner Arrives at Boston.

BOSTON—(AP)—Because of "reports something might happen" to the Japanese liner Keiyo Maru, sister ship of a vessel that narrowly escaped being bombed in Seattle, Wash., harbor last week, Police Commissioner Joseph F. Timilty today threw a heavy guard around the freighter.

Timilty, at first reluctant to discuss the reasons for establishing the guard, finally asserted he had acted after the line's local agents, Patterson, Wylde and company, had informed him they had received reports "something might happen" while the ship was being unloaded here. The agents, he said, "had heard rumors," but were unable to give any direct threats of violence.

SURVEY SHOWS MANSFIELDERS FAVOR POWER

Majority Approve Plan To Boost Naval Strength, But Only For Defense Purposes.

used for constructive purposes. I feel that they have entered the thing too hastily, especially as to the type of armament proposed

R. B. GARDNER, Captain, U. S. Air Corps, and Fifth District Commander, Ohio American Legion—We are living in chaotic times, when we need a national defense that is second to none in the world. When the World war came we were entirely unprepared, but we got into it just the same. We conscripted an army of men in short order, but the one thing we couldn't do was build a navy, and so we paid an exhorbitant rental for the equipment of other nations. In more than a year of flying in France I never had an American-made plane. I'm convinced that we are going to have to spend the money one way or another for defense—why not map out a program, and spend it carefully and wisely before the emergency arises. I do not believe a billion dollars an unreasonable figure—in view of the fact that we have one of the smallest air service in the world.

R. H. KING, insurance agent—We spent more than a billion dollars for emergency military equipment during the World war, and we had to spend it quickly and without much thought of what we were getting for our money. From the looks of things now, we may have to spend it again. Why not thoughtfully, carefully? The program will mean work for many men, and so long as the country must provide work for unemployed, why not apply it where it is sadly needed, in defense equipment and armaments?

MISS MARGARET WEST, executive secretary, Y. W. C. A.—I haven't had time to consider the president's proposal, but my first thought is that I favor spending money for strictly coastal defense, but personally, I would like to see a part of that billion spent in finding a permanent world economic adjustment.

F. L. WEAVER, Shelby, printer—If the increased navy is solely for our own defense, I'm for it. If it's for the protection of the property of a few Americans in foreign countries I don't think it's wise. We'd better know what the money is to be spent for before we spend it.

HOWARD WENNING, county recorder — The president's navy program will put men to work in a minor depression, and it is meant to show possible aggressor nations that we mean to protect ourselves. I'm not in favor of war, but I think a powerful navy will make other nations respect us more.

ADDISON SNYDER, 23 Foster street, factory worker — When there's so much talk of war all around us, we need more defense, but the president's request is for too much money.

C. J. ANDERSON, probate judge—If the increase in the navy is for defense, yes; if for aggression, I'm opposed to it. We need more protection.

A. H. WOOD, Mansfield schools attendance officer — The nation needs more defense on the water, but the president's program calls for too much money. It's important, however, that we aren't caught unprepared as we were in 1917.

REV. CHARLES F. SHERIFF, pastor St. Matthews Lutheran church—I am, first of all, for peace, but I do not believe that unpreparedness is the way to attain it. Right now we have to deal with cocky, belligerent nations who are indifferent to civilized gestures of peace, and I believe that the only way to impress them is to let them know, by means of a big army and navy, that we are not to be trampled on. We are dealing with non-Christian and half-civilized peoples—and we must talk to them in terms they understand, in order to preserve peace. A billion dollars, therefore, as means to peace for America, is not too much to pay.

FRED M. FRIZZELL, 50 Baldwin avenue, custodian at Y. M. C. A.—I don't think we need the additional warships for defense at the present time, that is until the United States releases some of her possessions, namely the Philippine Islands, then additional ships for national defense should be had.

FLOYD DENT, 497 West Fourth street, Boy Scout executive—I think that we should have adequate protection at all times, and think that the president's program for additional warships is all right. We can't have too much protection with things happening around us as they are at the present time.

REV. PAUL HOLLINGSHEAD, pastor of Central Methodist Episcopal church—The proposal to spend a billion dollars for defense is ridiculous, sheer folly. The United States has all that it needs in armaments and munitions for defense at home. To be sure, if we are going to China and South America to defend the investments of private industry, we will need a billion dollars, or more; but to that I am unalterably opposed.

MARSHALL C. MOORE, attorney—Taking in consideration the present world situation, it is obvious that our national defense should not be neglected. In view of these facts, it seems to me that now is the time to increase and not decrease our national defense. I feel that it is the proper thing to do, particularly with the present situation in the Orient. This country should have adequate facilities to protect its shores against any invasion.

REV. J. LOUIS WOLF, pastor of St. Mark's Lutheran church—I believe that national defense may be carried to the point of an ominous war gesture. I am for an adequate national defense here at home—but certainly not to move half way across the world.

MRS. WALTER L. BECKLEY, delegate to the National Defense council, who returned from Washington today—There is an entirely different atmosphere in the national capital than in the inland states. There is apprehension of war in the immediate future. At the conference this week there were 790 delegates from 40 women's organizations, all intent on promoting peace, and our most important gestures toward it were to pledge ourselves to support the universal service bill, the Ludlow bill, and to approve the president's appeal for a billion dollar defense fund. The term "adequate defense" must be interpreted in terms of the times, and right now adequate defense means a much larger army and navy than it did a year ago.

mysteries of science and medicine.

In the fields of medicine and transportation, particularly, there is a demand for ideas for which civilization has been waiting, Dr. Anspach declared.

"We have conquered a great many diseases in the past century, but science is only beginning to learn about others, and for the youth interested in medicine as a profession, there is a grand opportunity to gain fame and accomplish something worthwhile to future generations," he said.

He used the example of the recent threatened smallpox epidemic in Ashland to illustrate the progress that medicine has made in fighting that disease.

"Through vaccination and the knowledge doctors have of the malady, an epidemic was prevented, while not so many years ago the medical world would have stood helpless in the face of the spreading disease," he pointed out.

"You discover and conquer your own frontiers," he said. "The world always has paid well for ideas and always will. It is waiting for the contribution you can make."

H. W. Arlin, president of the board of education, who awarded diplomas to the graduates as they filed across the stage, urged them to make good use of their leisure time should they find it impossible to find work immediately.

Reminding them that the education process is continuous, Arlin said, "You are seniors tonight, but tomorrow you will be freshmen again, either in college or in the work you choose to do through life."

He added that the fact that business is now in a recession need not discourage youth.

In presenting the class for graduation, Principal Jesse Beer of Senior high school praised the group as "the class that has made a record in assuming responsibility."

Calls It Sign of Progress.

Asserting that the modern school places more demands on the time and abilities of the student, Beer said "members of this class have taken more responsibility than any preceding class, and future classes probably will continue to take on added duties. That is a sign of progress."

In his salutation, Paul Smith, president of the senior class said, "we have been given an education which will enable us to make good use of the opportunities offered us by democracy."

Rev. B. F. Hagelbarger, pastor of the First Christian church, gave the invocation and benediction.

The high school orchestra played the "Processional Grand March" as the graduates filed into the auditorium from each side of the stage and the recessional march as members of the class made their way out of the room.

Before they left, the graduates, clad in gray caps and gowns, sang the class song, the words of which were written by Miss Kathryn Huber, a member of the class.

Members of the graduating class, including 51 girls and 37 boys, are:

NEWS-JOURNAL ADDS INS WIRE SERVICE FEB. 1

Third Of Three Great Press Wire Associations To Be Started Tuesday.

And there's a newcomer, who also has a roving assignment. He's Paul Gallico. Once a sports writer in New York, he tried his hand at fiction and proved an immediate success. Then he joined International News Service, doing features. One of his most recent interviews was with the fasting dean of Memphis, the very Rev. Israel Harding Noe. Wherever an interesting story breaks, there you'll find Gallico, doing the "human side" of it.

These, then, are just a few of the men who'll help make up the daily news report of International News Service for readers of The News-Journal. There are thousands of others. For, like Associated Press and United Press, International News Service covers the entire world.

Each day, it will send, over leased wire, 27,000 words to The News-Journal. Add this to the 27,000 furnished by the Associated Press, and the same amount from the United Press, and you have a total of 81,000 words of news.

You wouldn't be able to read it all in an evening, and obviously, The News-Journal won't print everything sent to it by each of these giant services. But you'll get the "cream" of the news, because The News-Journal will have all the news available, and will be able to give you a comprehensive and thorough picture of what goes on.

For some time, The News-Journal has received a part of the International News Service report, but Tuesday will mark the first day the INS leased wire has been in operation.

Remember—no other paper the size of The News-Journal has "all three" major wire services. None of the three Columbus papers—and Columbus is much larger than Mansfield—has all three services.

The News-Journal strives constantly to give its readers the best—the best in local news, the best in district news, the best in state, national and international news, as well as the best in pictures and features.

The addition of International News Service is another step in its constant improvement.

THERE seems to be considerable misunderstanding about the closing ordinance for night clubs and barrooms. Many patrons, as well as managers are under the impression that you can stay in the barroom and drink as long as you like, so long as the bar closes promptly at the prescribed time—1 a. m. on week nights and 12 on Saturday.

But that's not what the ordinance says at all. It says specifically that a proprietor is liable to arrest if he permits drinking or "the possession of liquor" after the closing hour. In other words, if the patron orders a flock of drinks at five minutes of the closing hour, he must drink them and be prepared to leave the place at the end of the five minutes. If it takes 20 minutes to clear the room, then the proprietor must stop selling at 20 minutes of the closing hour.

Which a lot of folks didn't find out until last Saturday night, when Chief of Police Meade K. Bates made personal calls at a number of places, and explained it—in a very firm voice.

IT TAKES a firm hombre to enforce the law. Because, as we've said before, it's hell if you do and hell if you don't. Where an officer has a right to expect the most co-operation, he finds the least.

Among the places Bates called on personally was one of the swankier spots, and when he explained that 12 o'clock didn't mean five minutes after, and that there was to be no drinking after that hour, several of Mansfield's biggies rose right up and said "You can't do this to US." And on Monday morning an Indignant Voice called the chief to put him in his place.

"Look here," said the Prominent Citizen, "there is a lot of money invested in that barroom and we've got a right to make some money on the investment."

Yes, sir; there's a lot of confusion about that ordinance. Too many people think it should be enforced—on the other fellow.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, according to political observers, is eager to have a place in history that will outshine that of his cousin and predecessor, Theodore Roosevelt, and accordingly the American Institute of Public Opinion made a survey with this question: "In fifty years from now, whom do you think will be regarded as the greater president, Theodore or Franklin Roosevelt?"

Fifty-eight per cent of the answers said Franklin and 42 Theodore—about the same ratio as would vote for and against the president now.

Nothing could be sillier or more futile than for the people of today to guess what the people of 1988 will think. Perspectives change with time, and no person today, prejudiced for or against the president, can say what his historical stature will be fifty years from now. Maybe he will be classed as one of the greatest statesmen of all time, perhaps he will be called a madman by historians of the future.

For most public figures, it is just as well that they CAN'T guess their place in history.

THERE is a distinct disadvantage in all of the first run theaters in a city being under the same management. Warner Brothers announced this week that the current issue of "Time Marches On" will not be shown in any Warner theater in the United States.

No particular reason was given, except that they don't like it. And because the Brothers Warner, formerly of Ohio, do not like it, no one in Mansfield may see this interesting short picture feature unless we happen to catch it elsewhere.

I HAVE a suggestion to make to the insurance companies of America and will some agent please send it on to his home office? In every confession, made by juvenile delinquents that they have stolen cars, there is always this aspect of the case: the key was left in the car.

If the person who drives the car hadn't left the key there as a temptation to the boy, the car wouldn't have been stolen, the boy wouldn't have taken it and the insurance company wouldn't have to pay for whatever damages are done to it, even if it is recovered.

Most boys steal a car for a ride and then abandon it somewhere, for any marauder to strip—and the insurance company pays for the loss and damage. If there were a clause in every policy covering the theft of a car, that no claim would be paid where it is established that the key was left in the car, believe me, there would be a lot less carelessness on the part of owners—and a corresponding drop in devilry among bad boys.

THE International Red Cross has asked the American Red Cross to help raise a million dollars for the civilian sufferers in China. It is a fine humanitarian gesture, but it scarcely will be a popular one in America where several million civilians are suffering from cold and hunger and lack of proper medical care.

A similar amount was offered to the civilians of Japan, but that busy little bee said "No, thank you; we have plenty."

Have we been kidding ourselves about Japan not being able to hold out much longer—or is she merely trying to kid the world?

Link 'Dummy' Concern With Liquor Profits

GRAFT HUNTERS PROBING OHIO TRUCK SYSTEM

Committee Finds State Paid $175,000 Too Much on State Liquor Deliveries.

COLUMBUS—(AP)—An attempt to determine if Shaw Transport, Inc., was a "dummy" corporation organized to obtain a middleman's profit in business with the state government was being made today by the senate investigating committee.

Sen. Verner E. Metcalf of Marietta, a committee member, said the investigators had reason to believe the company was set up as a "dummy" under political auspices.

A state examiner reported that the liquor department canceled a trucking contract with U. S. Truck Lines Feb. 1, gave a contract to Shaw Transport immediately and that Shaw sub-let the contract to U. S. Lines.

Whereas U. S. Lines received 18 cents a case for trucking liquor in its original contract, Examiner W. A. Galigher said, it accepted the sub-contract at 10 and 12 cents a case. The contract with Shaw was for 17 cents a case.

Overpaid $175,000.

The examiner estimated that if 10 cents was the proper charge, then the state paid approximately $175,000 too much for trucking last year.

The investigating committee questioned R. M. Shaw of Columbus, head of the company, in a secret session, and the Ohio State Journal said it was disclosed that John F. Nolan of Steubenville was one of the principal stockholders. Nolan is chairman of the Jefferson county Democratic executive committee and a close friend of Gov. Martin L. Davey's administration.

Nolan could not be reached for comment.

Meanwhile committee Chairman J. Ralph Seidner greeted with an explosive "that's terrible" the reinstatement of Joseph R. Maiden, a Canton liquor inspector, who was accused before the committee of raising a hotel bill from $2 to $32.

State Liquor Director James W. Miller announced the reinstatement at Cleveland late yesterday, saying that Maiden, who was suspended Jan. 13, had made full restitution of the $30.

Miller and enforcement chief Al Humphrey asserted in a joint statement that "the larger reason for this action" is that Maiden "has been an unusually able and efficient official and in all other matters has proved himself very trustworthy."

'WHITE COLLAR' HOURS, PAY CUT

U. S. Steel Adopts Five-Day Week For Office Men To 'Share The Work.'

PITTSBURGH —(U.P.)—A salary cut amounting to 9 1-11 per cent and less work per week for all "white collar" employes of the United States Steel corporation and subsidiary concerns will be put into effect Feb. 1 in a "share-the-work" employment plan.

A spokesman for U. S. Steel today said the wage cut and shorter working hours will be continued until a "definite" improvement in steel operation conditions is seen. The "share-the-work" program was conceived, it was said, to combat the revenue shortage because of lack of steel orders.

Approximately 23,000 office workers and executives of the steel empire will be affected by the new working schedule, which will prevent discharge of about 3,000 workers in offices from coast to coast.

The "share-the-work" program was modeled, somewhat, after the plan by which mill workers in most steel plants now are employed.

The spokesman said the system would affect "everyone, from the highest paid executive down to the least-paid clerk."

NO INHUMANITIES FOR JEWS IN RUMANIA, KING CAROL PROMISES

By ALVIN J. STEINKOPF

BUCHAREST, Rumania—(AP)—King Carol, monarch of 18,000,000 people, assured the world today it need fear no Jewish pogrom in Rumania.

Speaking quickly and softly in perfect English, the king in a half-hour audience in his quiet study, a sunny room of the royal palace in the heart of Bucharest, told this writer:

"A Jewish problem? Yes, we have one and we are wrestling with it. How ultimately the problem is to be met is not altogether clear, but the first and important point of our policy will be that there shall be no violence to Jews. Of that we are certain."

Carol, in uniform of khaki and gold with ribbons of many decorations on his breast, sat at his great mahogany desk with its inlaid top.

He smoked cigarets reflectively from a long black holder. There were three telephones at his elbow, but during the audience they did not ring.

He seemed completely certain of satisfactory solution to the perplexing issues confronting the new government of Premier Octavian Goga—which made nationalism and anti-senitism its chief program.

"It is understandable that the United States should be interested in developments here, because you yourself have many Jews, certainly more than we.

"It is understandable that in some quarters there might be concern. But it may be stated on the highest authority that Rumania contemplates no inhumanities.

"How in all its phases the problem is to be met cannot be stated definitely now."

Asked whether there was prospect of mass deportations or of colonization of Jews in some other regions of the world, the monarch said that, on the part of the government, the matter had received no detailed study.

Up and Down THE STREET

Five-year-old Billy Zeigler, 130 Harker street, feels pretty badly today because one of his pet puppies disappeared yesterday. He had two four-month-old terriers, and he wouldn't mind sharing one with some other boy—if he just knew it was in kind hands. It was a black and white terrier, with a white star on its head. If any one has seen a stray puppy, or knows where it is, they could relieve the worries of a small boy by calling Dover 2037.

The legend of the absent-minded professor must give way to the absent-minded school marm . . . She is on the faculty at Senior high, and Sunday night she "clean forgot" the baccalaureate services . . . Friday morning, when students were excused, but teachers were supposed to show up, she overslept, and had to be called to the building . . . And there is a rumor that she forgot to show up at the commencement exercises.

Supt. W. L. Miller of Mansfield schools can sympathize now with the small boy who forgets his piece before an audience. In his introduction of Dr. C. L. Anspach, president of Ashland college, as the commencement speaker last night at Senior high school, Miller told the audience he had known and respected Dr. Anspach for 10 years. "He came to Ashland from—" and there Miller hesitated and looked around at the guest. He got no help and after another pause, Miller asked, "Just where did you come from, Dr. Anspach?" It was Michigan State college.

Here's one for the book of strange coincidences: Mrs. Jacob Weigand, 16½ South Diamond street, lost a dollar bill recently. She remembered opening her pocketbook near the fountain in Central park and was sure it had dropped out then. When her daughter, Marvel, came home that evening, she told her mother she had a bit of good luck—she had found a dollar bill in Central park near the fountain. Several hours lapsed between the time Mrs. Weigand lost the money and the time Miss Weigand walked through and picked it up.

MAUL FUNERAL MONDAY

Funeral services for Mrs. Pauline Maul, 82, of 244 Hedges street, who died at her home Friday, will be held at the Wappner funeral home at 2 p. m. Monday with Rev. Herman L. Gilbert of St. Paul Lutheran church officiating. Burial will be in the Mansfield cemetery. Friends may call at the funeral home.

NIPPON STORY OF INCIDENT MEETS DENIAL

American Denies He 'Insulted' Officer, Claims Japanese Attacked Woman.

WASHINGTON —(AP)— An account from John M. Allison, American diplomatic representative at Nanking, of the circumstances under which a Japanese sentry slapped him increased today the friction in United States-Japanese relations.

Allison denied flatly the official Japanese version that he had insulted a Nipponese officer. He described the attack Wednesday as unprovoked.

Secretary Hull sent instructions to Ambassador Grew at Tokyo to make representations.

Tells of Attack.

The account from Allison, third secretary of the embassy at Nanking, in brief was:

Japanese soldiers forcibly had taken a Chinese woman from the agricultural implement shop at Nanking university, an American institution, and attacked her.

Allison and Charles Riggs, an American and a member of the university faculty, accompanied the woman, Japanese consular police and gendarmes to the Japanese barracks where she was to try to identify her assailants.

The gendarmes advised Allison and Riggs not to go into the building, but did not tell them they could not. A gendarme and the woman then entered.

Allison and Riggs stepped inside the gate and a Japanese soldier rushed up, shouting "back, back."

Backed Up, Slapped.

"I backed up slowly," continued Allison, "but before I had time to get out of the gate he slapped me across the face and then turned and did the same to Mr. Riggs."

When the gendarmes advised that he and Riggs were Americans, Allison said, the soldier "became livid with rage" and was forcibly restrained only after he had torn off Riggs' collar.

"At no time," Allison said, "did either Mr. Riggs or myself touch a Japanese soldier nor did we speak to any except the gendarmes with us."

Hollywood Speaks—

—By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—Barring an extra's complete oblivion, the greatest anonymity in Hollywood is enjoyed by the girl who plays "second leads."

She can be well-known indeed, she can be beautiful and a fine actress, she can be as agreeable and pleasant and surprising as ice water at a cocktail bar, but in the Hollywood spotlight she just isn't.

Why this should be isn't clear unless you fall back on the obvious, which isn't necessarily true. As a second lead she's always eclipsed by the greater glitter of the star.

Some of us were ruminating on this circumstance the other day, and the name of Margaret Lindsay arose as the perfect example.

Say "Margaret Lindsay" in any gathering of movie reporters and they'll all think—"Oh, yes, the girl who got into pictures by pretending she was British."

That's been the "angle" on Margaret for five years now—ever since she fooled her way into the all-English cast of "Cavalcade." For about two years the publicity men at Warner's have been doing their best to change that angle—you can't blame Margaret for wearying of it—but they had no luck. Often they themselves give up and start from scratch with: "When Margaret Kies of Dubuque, Ia., was unable to crash pictures as an American," etc.

Other "angles" that have found their way into print on the Lindsay girl have been few. It has been dutifully recorded that she and Janet Gaynor are good friends, that she attended the American Academy of Dramatic Art in New York City, that she sculptures a little, that she is fond of vacations in Mexico, adores Hawaii, and so on. Once her adoration reached the point where she planned to buy an island, but to date there's no deed of transfer recorded. She dresses smartly, is a favorite companion of some of the colony's most eligible young men, she makes a nice salary, puts enough of it away, and keeps on playing second leads with an occasional first lead in second-string pictures.

Among her workers she is rated very easy to get along with, an excellent actress, a sincere and hard-working performer, intelligent and sympathetic. About the only occasion on which her nice disposition was ruffled arose because of a publicity man's desire to depart from the she-said-she-was-English angle. The young man, going into communion with himself, produced a little squib to the effect that Miss Lindsay, when troubled with a sore throat, always found prompt relief in gargling hot beer.

This item found its way to print, and in due course to Miss Lindsay's eyes. She lost no time in mailing the cutout, which ranks for truth along with Paul Muni's boyhood ambition to be Errol Flynn's and Edward G. Robinson and Humphrey Bogart's habit of wearing his shoes on the wrong feet in order to achieve frantic expressions of pain.

INCOME TAX IN NUTSHELL

NO. 6

Normal Tax and Surtax Rates.

The Revenue Act of 1936 provides for only one normal tax rate, that is, 4 per cent on the amount of the net income in excess of the allowable credits such as the personal exemption, credit for dependants, etc. The act provides for an additional credit for the purpose of the normal tax of an earned income credit, that is, 10 per cent of the amount of the earned net income but not in excess of the net income. The personal exemption and credit for dependents are also allowable as credits against the net income for the purpose of the surtax, the resulting net income being designated "surtax net income." The surtax is imposed on surtax net incomes in excess of $4,000. The rates increase in accordance with the amount of surtax net income included in varying so-called surtax brackets. On a surtax net income of $4,000 or less there is no surtax. On a surtax net income in excess of $4,000 and not in excess of $6,000, the rate is 4 per cent of such excess. The surtax upon a surtax net income of $6,000 is $80 and upon a surtax net income in excess of $6,000 and not in excess of $8,000 the rate is 5 per cent of such excess in addition to the $80, or a surtax of $180 upon a surtax net income of $8,000. The surtax on a surtax net income of $5,000,000 is $3,591,000, and upon a surtax net income in excess of $5,000,000, 75 per cent, the maximum rate, is applicable to such excess, in addition to the $3,591,000. Many taxpayers make the error of applying the maximum rate instead of the rate provided for in the bracket in which their surtax net income is included.

Following is an example of how to compute the tax on a net income of $8,500, all of which represents earned net income, the taxpayer being single and without dependents:

Net income	$8,500
Less personal exemption	1,000
Balance (surtax net income)	7,500
Earned income credit	850
Net income subject to normal tax	6,650
Surtax at 4 per cent on amount of surtax net income in excess of $4,000 but not over $6,000, 4 per cent on $2,000	$0
Surtax on 5 per cent on amount of surtax net income in excess of $6,000 but not over $8,000, 5 per cent on $1,500	75
Total surtax	155
Normal tax, 4 per cent on $6,650	266
Total normal tax and surtax	421

Taxpayers are advised to read carefully the instructions accompanying Form 1040 relating to the earned-income credit and surtax, as well as all other instructions thereon, before preparing their returns.

FARM BUREAU ELECTS MONDAY

Board to Name Officers for 1938; Business Volume for Year $745,000.

The board of seven directors of the Richland county farm bureau, three of whom were re-elected Thursday at the annual re-organization meeting will meet Monday night at farm bureau headquarters, 225 East Third street, to elect officers for 1938, according to Vance Clever, manager of the organization.

Re-elected to the board at Thursday's session at the First M. E. church were: W. E. Stough, Springfield township; H. H. Wolf, Franklin township, and M. E. Fisher, Jefferson township. Other directors whose terms extend through 1938 are C. C. Till, N. S. Robinson, G. H. Culler and R. R. Howard.

In his report of 1937 business, Clever told farm bureau members at the annual meeting that the total volume for the year was $745,971 as compared with $661,973 in 1936. The net gain of nearly $8,000 was $3,500 less than the increase in the preceding year, which Clever said was due to the declining prices of feed and grain during the last half of 1937.

Directors voted to pay a six per cent dividend on preferred stock and five per cent on common stock, adding a patronage dividend of one per cent on purchases, Clever said. Stock in the co-operative organization is owned by 856 farmers.

The principal speaker at the meeting was Ellis Cowling, Trumbull county author and educator, who said "democratic control is the only fundamental difference between co-operatives and other businesses."

He pointed out that "the distribution of profits according to patronage rather than in proportion to stock owned helps to maintain an economic democracy."

Other speakers on the program were A. W. Elliott, district farm bureau insurance supervisor; H. E. Miller, field man for the county farm bureau, and Wilbur Foust, manager of the co-operative creamery at Shelby. The meeting was in charge of H. H. Wolf.

The program included solos by Mrs. W. D. Baughman, numbers by a male quartet from Weller township and community singing led by G. S. Oswalt.

ST. PAUL'S TO HOLD MEMORIAL SERVICE FOR CHURCH LEADER

A memorial service in honor of the late Miss Mary E. Scior, a lifelong member of St. Paul Lutheran church who died Nov. 6, will be held at 10:30 a. m. Sunday.

During the services fellow employes of Miss Scior at the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company, will present a memorial to the church in her honor.

The memorial will be a brass receiving bason and four brass offering plates. The receiving bason is 15 inches in diameter, the rim bearing the words, "Forget Not to Do Good and to Distribute." The center is outlined with Greek letters, IHS, symbolic of Jesus. The identifying inscription reads, "In Memory of Mary E. Scior from Westinghouse Friends, Jan. 30, 1938."

The four offering plates are 12 inches in diameter, and are plain with the exception of red plush centers which carry the inscription of the cross and IHS.

Presentation of the memorial to the church will be made by Kenneth A. Donelson, representing the fellow workers of Miss Scior. Rev. Herman L. Gilbert, pastor, will receive the gift and conduct the service of dedication. Mary Ann Linn, a niece of Miss Scior, will assist in the presentation ceremony.

Miss Scior was superintendent of the primary department of St. Paul's for over 25 years. She was superintendent of the Light Brigade, recording secretary of the Sunday school, and Women's Guild, and treasurer of the building fund, and was an active worker in the church until the time of her death.

Music during the service will include the anthem, "Go Not Far From Me O God" from a "Christus e Miserere" by Zingarelli, to be sung by the choir, and three numbers by an instrumental trio composed of Ralph Bellstein, violin, Ernest Schafer, cello, and O. L. Saybold, organ.

Rev. Gilbert will speak on the subject, "The Highest Use of Christian Privileges."

Varied Topics Subject For Adviser

By VIRGINIA LEE

J. A. L. is married to a woman who has a grown and married son by a previous husband. The families lived together for awhile, but did not get along

The son, according to J. A. L., wants to run both houses, and my correspondent wants the son to stay away from his house. This, naturally, the mother resents, but she will not go to her son's house to stay.

"Shall I leave her, or let her son keep coming? Please advise me what to do."

The wisest thing would be to tell the son, calmly, but firmly, that you will not permit him to interfere in your affairs. Don't forbid him to come to your home, for you can imagine how a mother would feel at not being allowed to see her only son. But maybe he can come to see his mother when you are not at home, or she can go to see him occasionally.

If I were you I would try to keep the peace. If you and he can't like each other, at least you need not quarrel. I think you and your wife will be much happier if you make up your mind that you won't fight with her son, and neither will you permit him to run your home. Don't you think this is so? And do you think you can do it?

I don't see why you should break up your home because of this rather overbearing young man. Good luck to you.

DEAR MISS LEE. I wish to know if it would be wise for me to ask a boy to a formal dance the girls are giving at school. I do not like the other boys but would like a date with this certain boy. I know he likes me, but is very shy and bashful. I wish you would advise me whether to ask him or not.

"MARY LOUISE."

Yes ask him, Mary Louise. The invitation may give him just the encouragement he needs.

HOPELESS is discouraged because her father is a philanderer and people talk about him and are inclined to snub her because of her dad. She fears the talk about him may cause her engagement to be broken.

I should think your fiance would be all the more devoted if he knows you are suffering from another's misdeeds. Hopeless. Could you appeal to your father? Possibly if he knows that you are suffering from his actions, he will stop. You can tell him that if he continues to cause scandal and shame you will leave and live elsewhere. If he will not stop and it is possible for you to do so, leave home and find a more desirable place to live.

LONELY has fallen in love with a young man who has been too intimate with her for three years. Now he informs her that the girl he really cares for is about to be married to someone else, and he is very sad, but he cannot love Lonely as he knows she loves him. He advises her to forget him.

When will you girls learn your lesson, Lonely? It is possible that this young man will decide he cares enough for you to wed you, but probably not. It is unusual when a man marries the girl with whom he has had this relation.

Better try to put him out of your mind and start over, letting this experience teach you not to give too much when a man asks for your love.

THEATER

MADELINE CARROLL, one of the screen's lovelies, has a melting radio voice, with an English accent that has a ring of authenticity. . . . She was a guest star on the Bing Cosby program the other night . . . Her father was a school teacher at West Bromwich, England, and she was educated at Birmingham university. Madeline started out teaching school, and then embarked upon a stage career, working in small stock companies. She did her share of pavement pounding and finally went to Germany and France where she made a hit in pictures. She hasn't made many American pictures but most of them have been hits, among them "Lloyds of London," "The Prisoner of Zenda," "The General Died at Dawn" and "On The Avenue."

"True Confession."

The story of a born liar married to the most honest and ethical young lawyer in town seems like a tailor-made vehicle for Carole Lombard and Fred MacMurray who have made their fourth co-starring picture in "True Confession," opening with a midnight show at the Madison tonight. The comedy of the love tale's tribulations is heightened by the fact that she is a liar by profession, she actually does get a job, and then gets married, and then [illegible] she is putting it [illegible] John Barrymore has a choice part of the scatterbrained writer who is the truth about the murder. Equal care is evidenced in the remainder of the cast, whose members are such capable troupers as Edgar Kennedy, Una Merkel, Richard Carle and Porter Hall.

"The Hurricane."

A [illegible] is packed with such [illegible] of the [illegible] of-the-[illegible] Rowe [illegible] the [illegible] loses [illegible] seeking at the [illegible] of the great hurricane that brings death and destruction to the islands. The mechanics of the hurricane were worked out by the man who gave the screen the amazing locust scene in "Good Earth" and the earthquake sequence in "San Francisco." Dorothy Lamour and Jon Hall, handsome newcomer, have the roles of the South Sea Island lovers whose marriage is followed by disaster. Mary Astor, C. Aubrey Smith and Raymond Massey are important in the cast. The picture was made from a story by Charles Nordoff who wrote "Mutiny On The Bounty," and it was produced by Sam Goldwyn. It opens today at the Ohio.

"Ghost Goes West."

A delightful and romantic ghost who haunts castle corridors and makes love to pretty girls in the moonlight holds the center of interest in "The Ghost Goes West," a revival of which will be shown at the Majestic Sunday and Monday. A gay sort of ghost with a sense of humor comes back to the castle of his impoverished descendant, and together they have some merry adventures. The castle is purchased by an American millionaire, and the millionaire has a daughter. Thereby hangs a pretty story. The daughter is Jean Parker, while Robert Donat plays the ghost and the modern young man. The second feature is "Women In Prison," a story of girls in a penal institution.

"Double or Nothing."

A gay and irresponsible story of four persons vieying with a crooked lawyer to get possession of a million dollar legacy is told in "Double or Nothing" in which Bing Crosby has the capable support of Martha Raye, Mary Carlisle, Andy Devine and William Frawley. An eccentric millionaire leaves a will in which he has 25 purses each containing $100, "lost" on the streets, and for every honest person who returns them, there is a $5,000 reward. Four of them get an opportunity to double the five thousand and share a million—or lose it and get nothing. The action provides for some stunning night club sets and entertainment. The feature is booked for the Ritz tomorrow and Monday.

—Beauty—

Decide On Your Type, Stick To It

By GLADYS GLAD

"America's Most Famous Beauty."

IT'S A funny thing, but I've seen homely girls develop into really attractive damsels, merely because they stopped trying to be pretty, and decided to make themselves smart instead. And I've seen other femmes develop into the most winsome girlies merely by discarding their smart, tailored suits and frocks, and donning frilly, feminine dresses. Both groups were trying to be what nature had not intended them to be, and when they finally found themselves, their respective charms increased a hundred-fold.

The woman who wishes to enhance her prettiness should be careful of her make-up. She should not go in for flamboyant lipsticks and pale cheeks. For her, a soft peach or shell shade of powder that emphasizes the pinkish tones in her skin is best. Her cheeks should have a rosy warmth of color, and her lips should match them in hue.

The girl who is aiming for prettiness must see to it that every item of her entire ensemble harmonizes. Her hands should be soft, white and delicate, and her nails delicately rather than brightly colored. Her hair should frame her face with soft waves and ringlets. Curls are a great adjunct to prettiness, and the entire coiffure should be flatteringly soft rather than slick.

As to garb, the pretty girl should select styles that are dainty and feminine. She doesn't have to worry much about the last word in fashions, for becomingness is more important in her case than stylishness. Soft, frilly evening frocks that are not too daring, little sports frocks that are not of severe cut, and dressy afternoon frocks are best for this type of girl.

Colors, too, should be chosen to enhance the attractiveness of the hair, complexion and eyes, whether they are the latest fashionable colors or not. Usually pastel shades, and soft, warm colors are better for this type than bold ones, as they are more flattering.

Smart Type.

If you are the smart type—and this type is characterized by strong features, muscular slenderness, a sophisticated manner and a distinguished carriage—you must be just as careful of your make-up as the pretty type. Your make-up may be striking rather than delicate. Your powder, of course, should be of the same basic shade as your skin but should have in it a minimum of pink.

For the smart type a naturelle or cream rachel shade of powder, with only faintly rouged cheeks will provide a cool monotone that, when contrasted with brilliantly rouged lips and large darkly shadowed eyes will give the face a most striking and attractive appearance.

Take A Good Look At Yourself Before Altering Your Hair-Part

NOT GOOD . . .

The part demonstrated here by Hollace Shaw, radio singer, should have begun at the middle of the eyebrow and slanted up and back—as shown by dotted line. This slant would have made the cheekbone less prominent.

BETTER . . .

The right half of this arrangement is best—stronger eye and lip make-up. The center part is very becoming to Miss Shaw. A higher neckline on the dress probably would have made the shoulder line more agreeable.

BEST . . .

Curls at the top of the head and low at the back give a better line to Miss Shaw's hair style and help offset the effect of the small chin. The sausage curl at the side would be better as a sculptured curl, placed higher.

By BETTY CLARKE

(AP Feature Service Writer)

WHEN you've a mind to change the part in your hair take two things into consideration — your shoulder and neckline and the symmetry of your face.

It's ridiculous to think that a new part will do something for you unless you do consider those two factors, says Dan Edmond, New York hairdresser who is Queen Mother Marie's beautician.

If you don't have drooped shoulders, an extremely short neck or a lopsided face, you can expect these effects.

A side part often will make you look shorter, but it should be carried all the way back and slanted becomingly.

A zigzag part unless it is watched carefully, musses easily. It's very becoming for evening wear however, when it can be checked occasionally.

A center part is a good one to hide deficiencies. It will camouflage a long, large nose for instance. It also will help detract from the indefinite hairline and make its wearer look taller. But it should not be worn by anyone whose face is decidedly non-symmetrical . . . or whose shoulders droop.

Eye make-up is especially important with the center part. Lashes should be retouched carefully and eyebrows plucked evenly at the center and tapered generously at the ends.

The placing of eyeshadow also is important. It should be applied carefully between the lids and eyebrows—beginning in the middle of the brow and working out.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

I looked at Mary with relief at her docility, mingled with admiration for her shrewdness in deducing Miss Whitlock's presence in the house.

"Smart little girl!" I gibed. "Yes, Miss Whitlock came last night. I'll fetch her directly, and have her decide what you can have for breakfast."

She made a gesture of distaste. "I'm not a bit hungry," she said.

'You will be by the time your breakfast is ready,' I told her. 'We won't hurry you a bit, however. Now lie back and rest until I come back."

I bent to kiss her, and she flung her arms around my neck in a convulsive hug as she returned my kiss.

Mischief Returns.

"What would I ever do without you, Auntie Madge?" she said. "You are so good to me!"

'You've been pretty good to me, Mary, in your time,' I said huskily.

A gleam of the old mischief crept into her eyes.

"Public Benefactor, Number One, that's me," she said. "And I'm prepared to be a very nice child and a docile patient. Bring on your Miss Whitlock!"

Miss Whitlock was ready to be brought. I found out when I knocked upon the door of her room. She opened it immediately and I saw that she was dressed in uniform.

"It's only half after seven," I said, looking at my watch, "and I told you breakfast was at eight. Come downstairs with me now, and I'll see that you are fed before you take a look at your patient."

Wants Her Opinion.

"Is she ill?" she asked with quick solicitude.

'I think she has a headache," I replied, "but she is much fatigued, and she wants to get to New York, away from everything, as she expresses it. That suits me perfectly, for I really ought to go in today. But of course, I want your professional opinion of her before she starts. She may have a temperature but barring that, if you think it won't hurt her, I'd like to make the change today."

"Can you take me over to her now?" she asked competently, picking up a tiny case from the table.

"After your breakfast," I said firmly.

"I've just finished my breakfast," she said, smiling. "Your incomparable Katie met me in the upper hall when I left my room this morning—I think she'd been lying in wait for me. She asked my breakfast order and filled it promptly and royally. So you see I am at your service from now on."

'Then come with me," I said, and we went swiftly down the hall to Mary's room.

"Good morning, Miss Whitlock!" Mary said cheerily, and I saw that she was making a tremendous effort to discipline her emotions and "carry on" in her usual joyous, high-spirited manner. "Auntie Madge is afraid I may be running a temperature or somepin, but I can assure you that the old system is functioning beautifully. Trot out your implements of torture and give me the once and twice, and I'll bet you one of Katie's cookies you'll say it's okay for me to trek to the great city 'with my banjo on my knee'."

She sang the last words liltingly, and Miss Whitlock smiled indulgently as she shook down her clinical thermometer.

"I don't think you have any temperature," she said "but it won't do any harm to verify my guess. Now you clamp your lips on this, young woman, and let's hear nothing more from you until I take it out."

She slipped her fingers to Mary's wrist and with watch in her other hand, counted her pulse. When she finally took out the thermometer, Mary's face and eyes were tense with suspense, and I was conscious of tension in my own nerves and muscles. Would I be able to go into the city as Dicky so strongly desired?

HOROSCOPE

For Sunday, Jan. 30.

Sunday's horoscope is a rather conflicting one, with many promises of progress and stability coming from industry and steadfastness. But beware of a disintegrating force, a sudden upheaval, change, travel or another surprise, particularly in the domestic or social circle in which there may be much liveliness or commotion.

Those whose birthday it is may have a devastating year with change, removal or journeys suddenly precipitated. There may be some change in the domestic or social circle. After such change there may be substantial improvement in the fortune or possessions.

For Monday, Jan. 31.

Monday's astrological forecast is for a day of great progress and prosperity, with many expansive ventures. There are signs of promotion and favors from employers or superiors. Nevertheless, there is need of caution against fraud, deceit and treachery. Also there is augury of sudden and devastating occurrence, possibly in the home circle or in romantic entanglements. Friendship and pleasant affairs may engage the household.

If This Is Your Birthday.

Those whose birthday it is may encounter a year of upheaval or disturbance probably upsetting the domestic regime. Success, promotion, favors or preferment from employers or superiors may be expected. Financial gain through speculation is presaged.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

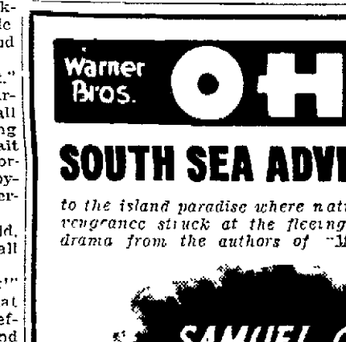
"The Authority on Authorities"

PREVENTING TWO LOSERS

IF YOU HOLD the A, Q and J of your trump suit, with one of those secondary honors opposite the other one and the A, but do not possess the 10 or 9, your best chance, usually, to avoid losing two tricks in the suit, consists of leading a small card toward the single honor. In fact, it is impossible to keep from losing one trick in the suit, and it is easy to lose two of them if you lead the single one toward the others.



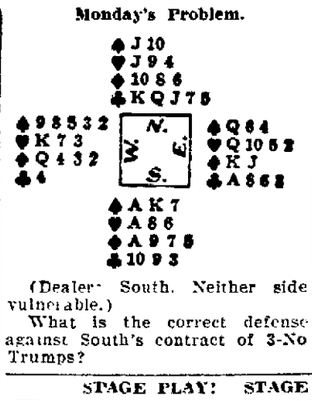
(Dealer: East. Neither side vulnerable.)

After a pass by East, South's opening bid on this deal was 1-Spade. West overcalled with 2-Clubs, North bid 2-Hearts, South 3-Diamonds, North 4-Diamonds and South 4-Spades.

West cashed the clubs A and K and then switched to the heart J, which was won in the dummy with the K. The spade Q was then led and won by West with the K. West returned the heart 10 which was won with the A and the spade J finessed. This held, but the declarer was disappointed to find, upon cashing the spade A, that East still held a winning trump, so that 4-Spades could not be made.

With so many high cards missing in the trump suit and able to afford only the loss of one trick in the suit, the declarer's best play was to have led a diamond to the South hand and then a low trump toward dummy's Q. With the K in the West hand, this play would have limited the opponents to capturing only one trick in that suit. Even if East had held the K, the play would have succeeded, provided he did not hold all the top missing cards.

Monday's Problem.



(Dealer: South. Neither side vulnerable.)

What is the correct defense against South's contract of 3-No Trumps?

Peanut Sticks—Four eggs, one cup sugar, four tablespoons cold water, one cup flour, sifted with one teaspoon baking powder, one-half teaspoon flavoring. Beat egg yolks, add sugar, then cold water, sifted flour, then extract. Fold in beaten egg whites. Pour into a pan about one inch deep. Bake 45 minutes in moderate oven. Make a thin butter cream frosting. Put large unsalted peanuts through food chopper, using medium knife. When cake is cold cut into slices about one and a half by four inches, cover each completely with a thin coating of frosting and roll in ground peanuts, covering thoroughly. Set aside until frosting has hardened. Makes about 24. Other unsalted nuts may be used—Emma Schmidt.

Wipe Clothesline.

Always wipe the clothesline with a damp cloth before hanging up the laundry. This prevents dirt from staining the clothes.

Measuring Flour.

Sift all flour before measuring. To make level measurements fill cup or spoon and scrape off excess with the back of a knife.

A few tablespoons of cornmeal added to flour used in making pancakes, gives them a delicious flavor.
